Major Quake Hits Turkey

DIYABAKIR, Turkey (UPI) — A powerful earthquake with a magnitude of 7.6 on Richter scale devastated at least two towns today and jolted 10 provinces in eastern Turkey.

A government minister said there were at least 3,000 dead. Several hours after the shock Turkish radio reported 574 confirmed deaths.

The Kandille Observatory in Istanbul said the temblor measured 7.6 on the open-ended scale of intensity, making it the most powerful earthquake in the world this year since the series of shocks four months ago that reportedly killed tens of thousands of people in China.

Defence Minister Ferit Melen, who spoke to reporters after a cabinet meeting in Ankara, said, "our information is that at least 3,000 people died."

Soldiers were rushed into duty as rescue workers. All communications with the stricken area were broken.

The tremors were also felt in the Caucasus Mountains of the Soviet Union, but no casualties or serious destruction were immediately reported on Soviet territory.

An official of the seismological centre in the Soviet Georgian capital of Tbilisi said the ground shook in the Armenian town of Leninakan, which is just over the border from Turkey.

The Kandilli Observatory in Istanbul said the quake hit at 2:25 p.m. (4:25 a.m. PST) with a magnitude of 7.9 on the Richter scale.

STAY QUERIED

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Tuesday he has asked for a report on the decision to stay a charge of criminal negligence against Richard Redekop of Vanderhoof.

Gardom would not comment further on the renewed controversy over the death last July of Coreen Thomas, 21, a member of the Stoney Creek Reserve. (Alcohol town's main problem see Page 12.)

Bill Sets Quotas On Immigration

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced legislation Wednesday in the Commons to permit immigration ministers to set an annual quota on the number of foreigners allowed into Canada.

Introduced by Immigration Minister Bud Cullen, the proposed legislation also gives the government authority to steer immigrants away from crowded major cities to places where jobs are available.

Underlying the quotas are a population plan for the country. There are about 23 million inhabitants now, and the tradition since the 1960s is that Canadians get jobs before immigrants do.

Currently 7.6 per cent of Canadians are without work and unemployment is expected to increase this winter.

The names of categories of immigrants, used now under the government's point system for admitting foreigners, have been changed and one category has been expanded.

The proposed bill, designed mainly by Mr. Cullen's predecessor Robert Andras, now president of the treasury board, replaces the current immigration act passed by Parliament in 1952.

The 1952 law contains provisions regarded as old-fashioned and embarrassing. The new act would make law of several regulations passed by cabinet in the last 10 years and attached to the original bill.

The new bill is based on recommendations of a parliamentary committee which held public hearings across Canada after a government paper, containing options, was published in 1973.

Outmoded rules banning "idiots, imbeciles and morons," are dumped. And epileptics, now only allowed to stay under ministerial permits because the current law prohibits their entry, would be permitted landed immigrant status.

Exclusion on health grounds "will be based solely on danger to public health or safety or excessive demands on health or social services."

Immigrants let in on the basis they are sponsored dependents of Canadian residents will be relabelled "the family class."

NEWS BRIEFS

Bligh's Log Sold

LONDON (AP) — A small, water-stained notebook used by Capt. William Bligh as a log after the mutinous crew of the HMS Bounty cast him adrift in a rowboat, was sold in just 55 seconds for $90,730 at a Christie's auction Wednesday.

Bank of B.C. Flush

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bank of British Columbia has reported a 10.8-per-cent increase in revenues, after taxes, for the 1976 fiscal year.

Olympic Fraud

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police have laid six charges of fraud, extortion and kickbacks for $360,000 against Joseph Zappia, president of Les Terrasses Zarolega, the construction company which built the Olympic Village.

Dog Killers Hunted

VERNON (CP) — RCMP here are investigating the poisoning of several dogs during the past few days. Eight dogs have been given strychnine. One died under treatment and two others were shot by their owners to put them out of their misery.

Busters the Loser

VANCOUVER (CP) — After 25 years Busters Auto Towing has lost its contract with the City of Vancouver. The $2 million contract will go to Unitow, a new company formed by independent tow truck operators.

Wreckage Sifted

ATHENS (Reuter) — Aviation experts sifted through the burned wreck of an Olympic Airways Japanese-built airliner today for clues to why it crashed Tuesday, killing all 50 persons on board.

B.C. Tel's Laura Laprise amid 141,000 new phone books

PHONE BOOK SHRUNK

B.C. Tel is beginning delivery of 141,000 new phone directories for the Victoria area and they are smaller but presumably better than ever.

Names and numbers are reduced to six point type from seven point, making the Victoria area the last major area in the province to make the conversion. Vancouver phone books went to six-point type about 30 years ago.

The books are expected to be delivered by next Wednesday, the date they come into effect. A few numbers in the new book do not come into use until Dec. 1 and B.C. Tel officials have requested that customers use the old books until then.

Customers in outlying areas will receive their copies in the mail.

The cover features the Peace River flowing through the countryside in northeastern B.C.

Using smaller type and photocomposition techniques, the book will have at least 479 names per page, an increase of 50 names over the old book in larger type.

A higher quality newsprint is used, creating a whiter look.

The changes saved B.C Tel $6,200 in printing costs and $12,300 for 44,500 fewer pounds of paper in the Victoria book.

There are more names in the white pages but only 247 pages were used, down from 310 in the old book.

A B.C. Tel spokesman said elderly people who find difficulty with the new name and number size can obtain operator assistance free if they explain they can't read the type.

Most people should be able to read the new numbers as easily as those in the old book, the spokesman said.

TV TALK SPARKS PROTEST

OTTAWA (CP) —Prime Minister Trudeau's plans to address the nation tonight about the results of the Nov. 15 Quebec election have provoked bitter partisan debate.

Inside the Commons, opposition MPs chastised the prime minister Tuesday for planning to discuss the Parti Quebecois victory on radio and television before addressing Parliament on the subject.

Outside the House, opposition spokesmen protested that once again the prime minister has demanded air time from the publicly-financed CBC to discuss a semi-partisan issue. But he does not plan to allow the opposition to read his remarks in advance so appropriate replies can be prepared.

The CBC has decided the issue is partisan enough for opposition parties also to be allowed air time, Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark told reporters.

However, Clark was not sure he would respond immediately following the pretaped Trudeau broadcast at 5 p.m. PST.

"It is probable that I will accept the invitation," Clark said.

Agent for Lockheed Used by Canada

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., under fire for making questionable payments to "agents" for nuclear reactor sales in Argentina and South Korea, is using the giant Japanese trading house, Marubeni Co., as its agent in Japan.

The Marubeni trading company was involved in the Lockheed pay-off scandal in Japan.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday he has no way of knowing whether money paid by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) to foreign agents for Argentina or South Korea reactor sales was used as payoffs to promote reactor sales abroad.

And he said he has asked the Commons public accounts committee to investigate the whole affair that has arisen as a result of $10.5-million in payments by AECL to agents in Argentina and South Korea that have been questioned by the auditor general.

AECL officials are refusing to provide any further details on the South Korean and Argentine dealings and are also denying any knowledge that payoffs could have taken place.

But reliable government sources have revealed that in mid-1973 there were suggestions from an unidentified Export Development Corp. official that the EDC was having trouble figuring out how to finance an $8-million "bribe" in connection with the South Korean purchase of a CANDU reactor.

Treated as a joke at the time, the EDC reference has suddenly taken on seeming significance with this week's auditor general's report.

The report identifies as questionable an $8.1-million payment to a Tel Aviv-based agent company for services rendered to AECL on the South Korean CANDU reactor sale.

The payment was questioned because the auditor general believes it was inadequately documented.

The EDC arranged the export financing for the South Korean sale as well as the Argentine sale.

AECL said today that the agent fees on the South Korean sale were in fact not

OLDER SINGLES TO GET BREAK

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government has accepted the fact that middle-aged and older people on welfare have different problems than do single, unemployed young men, says Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

"We've been treating the older singles as if they were 22- or 23-year-olds," Vander Zalm said in an interview following a closed meeting with the Vancouver Resources Board.

"They've been caught in a policy which was designed for the young guy coming in for welfare."

Vander Zalm said that as a result of the meeting he would return to Victoria with instructions to his staff to "look for changes soon" in rates in the government's new Guaranteed Available Income for Need (GAIN) program.

The Vancouver board had complained that GAIN worked a special hardship on single older people under the age of 55 because it lumped them in with all other single people as potentially employable.

Under GAIN, single persons aged 55 to 59 were given an increase of $70 per month to a total of $230, while all other single people were kept to $160.

Vander Zalm said that original idea of GAIN was to "concentrate on employment first and social assistance as the alternative."

Rhodesia Crosses Border

SALISBURY (UPI)— Rhodesia said today its armed forces, using aircraft, have attacked Mozambique troops and inflicted casualties in retaliation for an "incident of unprovoked aggression."

A communique issued by security force headquarters said the action was ordered after Frelimo troops in Mozambique fired on Rhodesian forces along the eastern border.

"The security forces were subjected to heavy mortar and machine gun fire," the communiques aid. "Appropriate retaliatory measures were taken, including the use of aircraft, and it is known that Frelimo suffered a number of casualties. There were no security force casualties."

Meanwhile, in Geneva, nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo will try again Thursday to find a joint stand on Britain's latest bid to prevent a total breakdown of the Rhodesia peace conference.

Marguerite Staying—Davis

Transport Minister Jack Davis said today the Princess Marguerite will stay on the Victoria-Seattle run.

The minister said the Marguerite will be retained on the run not because of agitation in the two cities for retention, but because of good business reasons.

Davis said: "It is still a losing operation but it wouldn't lose as much, say, as putting the Queen of Surrey on the run."

There has been no decision yet on what happens to the Queen of Surrey but Davis said he is actively pursuing the possibility of leasing the vessel to the federal government for use on Canada's east coast.

That way, he said, the Queen of Surrey, which cost British Columbia taxpayers $18 million, could be earning the province $2.5 million a year on a lease basis.

The minister said the federal government is leasing two vessels like the Queen of Surrey for use on Canada's east coast and is looking for a third.

Socreds Stronger Than Ever: Survey

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A public opinion survey indicates that if there was a provincial election today, the Social Credit government would be returned with an increased majority.

University of Victoria sociologist Dan Koenig said his latest sampling of vote views across B.C. suggests the Socreds have not been hurt by austerity moves they have imposed in their first 10 months in office.

At the same time, the survey shows New Democratic Party support right on the heels of declared Socred voters and a substantial block of uncommitted voters which could swing any election either way.

Provincial Liberal support has dipped while Progressive Conservative backing has climbed slightly.

The latest survey is based on replies from 599 people in September and October, a representative sample from across the province.

What Koenig did was compare responses to the question: "if another provincial election were held today, for which political party's candidate would you vote?" which appeared on the latest as well as two surveys earlier this year.

The first survey drew most of its 1,048 replies in February and the second 905 answers, most of them in April, after tabling of the provincial budget.

The results showed Social Credit support remained virtually unchanged, increasing from 32 per cent in February to 32.1 per cent in April and to 34.4 per cent in September-October.

Corresponding changes for the other parties were: NDP —31.4 per cent, 32.4 per cent and 30.6 per cent; Liberals—10.7, 10.7 and 4.8 per cent and PC—8.4, 11.1 and 11.5 per cent.

The undecided, abstainers and non-committal respondents to that question in the three surveys stood at 17.5 per cent, 13.7 per cent and 18.7 per cent.

Koenig cautioned that actual Social Credit strength customarily is considerably under-represented by his surveys asking for party prefer-

DUH AND TING GOT TO GO

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to teach senior francophone civil servants how to speak English without a French-Canadian accent.

The Public Service Commission, the federal hiring and language training agency, has just established a special language course called "accent correction for senior administrators."

The aim is to help the government's top francophone bureaucrats sound less French when they speak English.

Course organizers said Tuesday the emphasis will be on clearing up common mistakes among francophones, like saying "duh" for "the" and "ting" for "thing."

"There's a joke that the 'C-H in the middle of the Montreal Forum stands for 'Centre Hice'," linguist Howard Woods of the commission's language bureau said in an interview Tuesday.

The language bureau will begin advertising the course in government departments in January and will proceed with classes if enough departments want to pay $375 a person for the special training.

The course is only open to senior civil servants who have passed the government's most stringent English-language knowledge examination and are considered fully bilingual.

The course will not necessarily reduce language mistakes among francophones, he said, but it will cut annoyance among anglophones who hear words mispronounced.

Limits May Outlast AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation administrator, Donald Tansley, said Tuesday that wage rulings he makes now will probably continue in force until expiray dates of contracts even if the government decides to end its restraint program early.

He was replying to questions before the Commons finance committee which suggested unions might try to reopen contracts which have had pay raises rolled back if the program ends before the planned expiry date of Dec. 31, 1978.

"I would think an order is for the life of the contract," he said.

Gov't Unaware Royal Prober Was Fired

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was unaware that an accountant appointed to a recently-announced royal commission on financial mismanagement was a director of a Crown company under fire from the auditor-general, Treasury Board President Robert Andras said today.

Mr. Andras said he became aware only late Tuesday of H. Marcel Caron's involvement on the board of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

He told the Commons he would not ask for Mr. Caron's resignation from the controversial $1,000-a-day commission until he decided whether a conflict of interest was involved.

Conservative James McGrath (St. John's East demanded that Mr. Caron, 57, an accountant with Clarkson, Gordon and Co., be asked to resign.

There was no doubt that a conflict of interest existed, Mr. McGrath said.

Caron was among five directors removed from AECL.

During questioning on the nuclear reactor payoffs issue, Energy Minster Alastair Gillespie was asked about the recent shake-up in the AECL board.

"It is fair to say that shortly after I became responsible for the agency I felt there were weaknesses," the minister said.

He referred in particular to the loss of $100 million on the sale of a reactor to Argentina. Renegotiation of the contract reduced the loss to $25 million.

Other changes in the senior public service included shifts at the department of industry, trade and commerce.

O. G. Stoner, now deputy trade minister and former deputy head of the trasport department, also has been appointed to the commission.

Gordon Osbaldeston, deputy in the treasury board, will replace Stoner in the trade department, government informants said Tuesday.

Osbaldeston is one of several senior bureaucrats who are fighting Auditor-General J.J. Macdonell's suggestion that a comptroller-general be appointed above the senior public servants to over-see government spending.

Osbaldeston also has been named as one of the replacements on the AELC board of directors. His replacement at treasury board still is under consideration.

Also on the royal commission is chairman Allen Lambert, president of the Toronto Dominion bank and head of a private advisory group that led to $60,000-a-year pay levels for top-level bureaucrats.

The other member is Prof. John Hodgetts, a University of Toronto teacher and author of a book defending the competence of government bureaucracy in Canada.

Thousands Frightened Into Shots

United Press International

Federal officials backpedalled a bit on their earlier confirmation of a case of swine flu in Missouri, but the scare was enough to send thousands of Americans to seek inoculations.

"There's nothing like an immediate threat to jolt me out of my normal complacency," said Rick Pope, a law student at the University of Illinois in Urbana, who said he now planned to get a swine flu shot.

Health officials in several states Tuesday reported thousands of telephone calls from people wanting to know where they could get their shots.

"I have done nothing but had swine flu fits since I got in this morning," said a weary worker at the Jackson County health department in Independence, Mo.

Doctor Rift Surfaces on Hospital

A long-standing feud within the B.C. Medical Association has surfaced in a highly critical letter sent to its 4,200 members from Dr. William Jory, the current president.

In the letter, dated Nov. 17, Jory accuses Dr. William Ibbott, immediate past-president, of committing the association to a policy its board of directors opposes — building of a 250-bed teaching hospital on the UBC campus, announced by the provincial government last month.

Jory says repudiation of an agreement made by Ibbott for the BCMA "has caused a crisis of confidence in our relationship with government."

An emergency meeting of the executive committee resulted in the matter being referred to a meeting of the board of directors Dec. 4.

"I cannot stress too strongly that failure to properly resolve this matter will jeopardize all our future negotiations with government," Jory's letter to B.C. doctors says.

Last May Health Minister Bob McClelland set up a task force on medical teaching facilities. The BCMA was among nine agencies, hospitals and government departments involved, with Ibbott, an executive and board member, representing the BCMA.

Jory's letter said that unknown to him, the task force's first meeting decided that the parties would be bound by the decisions of their representatives.

"Thus the BCMA finds itself in direct conflict . . . with the task force report to which it has been bound by its representative."

A source close to the association today described the dispute as part of "medical politics" between a reform and an establishment group, at odds for years within the BCMA.

Jory is a member of the reform group and Ibbott is associated with the establishment, he said and added that doctors in Victoria tend to align themselves with the latter side.

Commission Move Blows Up Squall

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition parties Tuesday unleashed a squall of protest against the government's setting up of a Royal Commission in rsponse to the auditor-general's criticism of public spending controls.

In a stormy question period, filled with shouts and jeers Prime Minister Trudeau defended the decision to have a commission explore some of the proposals made by Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell.

"It seems to me," he told NDP leader Ed Broadbent, "that any parliamentarian should understand that our institution does not necessarily have to run the way accountants say it should."

In his annual report to Parliament Monday, Macdonell said financial management and control in the federal government was "grossly inadequate."

Broadbent had said he did not understand how appointing a chief financial officer, as Macdonell suggests, would affect the rights of Parliament as the government claimed.

Opposition leader Joe Clark said the setting up of a Royal Commission on spending was a "three-year stall" by the government.

He pressed the government for details on what it would do in the interim to remedy the spending control procedures which the auditor-general found grossly inadequate.

ence. Many Socred supporters apparently show a tendency either to refuse to answer the question or to respond with an answer such as "I will vote for the candidate rather than the party."

He said he was surprised Social Credit strength had not been hurt by a number of austere and seemingly unpopular measures enacted since coming back to power in the election last December.

Vociferous opposition to such measures appears to be the result of increased opposition by a segment of the public who usually vote NDP anyhow, he said, but who are not generally so outspoken in their opposition to Social Credit policies.

Asked if an election today would produce results much different from last December, he said: "quite surprisingly, it would appear that Social Credit would be returned with an increased majority."

Secession Plan Laid In West

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 100 persons decided Tuesday night to lay the foundation for an independent western Canada, and set up charters of the organization in three provincial ridings.

The chapters are in Vancouver South, Vancouver Centre and Delta.

Doug Christie, a Victoria lawyer and chairman and founder of the Committee for Western Independence, told the meeting at the University of B.C. that only the naive think that the election of the Parti Quebecois does not spell the end of Quebec in confederation.

"In Quebec there were other alternatives to (Premier Robert) Bourassa, Christie said. "History will be made in the next two years such as this country never thought possible.

"We in the west have the right to demand the same privilege."

Canada Slashes Oil Exports

OTTAWA (CP) — Oil exports to the United States will be slashed by about 21 per cent effective Jan. 1, Marshall Crowe, chairman of the National Energy Board, said today.

Crowe told the Commons national resources committee that the level of exports licensed by the board will drop to about 305,000 barrels a day from 385,000 in December.

Crowe told the committee that for January the board will license heavy oils separately, allowing an increase in shipments of that type of crude.

Without that provision, he said, exports to the United States would have dropped to about 250,000 barrels a day in 1977.

In Kuwait Arab oil ministers ended a two-day meeting today apparently still disagreed on the size of a coming increase in their oil prices.

Sheikh Abdel Aziz Ben Hamad Al Thani, finance and oil minister of Qatar, told the Qatari News Agency, the meeting's results were "fruitful" and "will have deep effects on the future of the region."

But when asked about the price increase the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is expected to decide on at its meeting in Qatar, scheduled for Dec. 20, Thani said only, "OPEC's committee of economic experts issued a price recommendation based purely on economic studies after its recent meeting in Vienna."

covered by EDC-financed funds.

Rather, the agent was paid out of the down payment on the reactor paid to AECL by South Korea. The down payment was later said to total $36-million.

The government and AECL have defended the use of agents in foreign countries, arguing that otherwise AECL would have to pay for Canadian staff to deal with the countries to which AECL is trying to sell reactors.

AECL says that the Japanese agent and an unidentified representative in Mexico are being paid "modest" retainers to keep the AECL up to date on related developments in the respective countries.

Canada is trying to sell reactors to both Mexico and Japan.

AECL says that if Marubeni helped sell a CANDU reactor in Japan, then it would likely be paid a commission on the sale. But the AECL official added that it is not certain that Marubeni would in fact be used in an active sales push in Japan.

Neither the Japanese nor Mexican agents are currently actively involved in promoting the CANDU reactor.

AECL says it doesn't have an agent in Italy but instead is using its own limited sales staff to try and arrange a nuclear reactor licensing agreement with that country.

the weather

Rain occurred at many south coastal areas overnight with mixed rain and snow in central and southern B.C. Some north coastal stations were realtively clear. A weather disturbance will give occasional rain to the south coast today and mixed rain and snow in the southern interior. The precipitation will end in most areas this evening as the disturbance moves south of the province. A Pacific ridge of high pressure moving inland on Thursday will give clearing skies in many areas. Cloud will persist in some interior valleys. Afternoon temperatures in the interior will be a little cooler on Thursday.

N-Cloud in Plane Path

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — British Airways and Air France were informed Tuesday of a second cloud of fallout from China's nuclear blast last week that might drift into the path of transatlantic supersonic airliner flights.

The matter was discussed by offcials from the U.S. transportation department and Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and the two airlines, which use high-flying Concorde airliners on some transatlantic routes.

FAA administrator John McLucas said later the radioactive debris is between 40,000 to 67,000 feet high. Radiation monitors will be put on high-flying airliners to see whether any precautionary flight rerouting is needed.

Concorde generally operates at 50,000 to 60,000 feet and carries some monitoring equipment. Spokesman for British Airways and Air France said the meeting with the U.S. officials had been preliminary and exploratory and they were not asked formally to do anything.

An FAA source said some U.S.-operated Boeing 747 jumbo jet airliners which fly at high altitudes might be designated to carry special radiation monitors.

Government authorities forecast no significant increase in radiation or any serious health problem from the second cloud, expected to move into the United States from Canada by Thursday.

The first cloud has been drifting across northern parts of the United States for the last fe wdays and is likely to have floated out across the Atlantic Ocean in the next day or so. No health danger has been reported, although authorities said radiation levels rose slightly in eight western U.S. cities.

'Harass and Obstruct' AIB, 28,000 Teachers Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Teachers' Federation is calling on the province's 28,000 teachers to "harass and obstruct the bureaucratic operation" of the federal wage controls program "in every way possible."

Federation president Bill Broadley said in an interview Tuesday night that the federation's harassment and obstruction plans includes a possible court action to challenge the provincial government's right to surrender teachers' bargaining rights to Anti-Inflation Board jurisdiction.

Broadley was commenting on a six-point series of recommendations published Nov. 16 in the federation's newsletter. The recommendations, now part of federation policy, were approved by executives and regional officers at a meeting last month.

The recommendations include:

—Teachers should not accept a two-year wage agreement from school boards covering 1976-77;

—Wage controls and Anti-Inflation Board regulations "make it impossible for teachers to carry on any effective form of collective bargaining," meaning teachers won't be able to hold 1976 increases negotiated before anti-inflation regulations came into effect;

—No teachers' bargaining unit "should accept any process that recognizes the present arbitrary wage controls;"

—Teachers must be prepared to give up short-term advantages that might be gained by accepting "any facet of the wage control program," and no association should sign a two-year averaging agreement with its school board;

—The federation maintains that political opposition "in all its ramifications" is the only route to returning full collective bargaining rights to the teachers and the 75 school districts in B.C.;

—"Teachers should actively oppose the wage control program in every way possible. Teachers should harass and obstruct the bureaucratic operation of these controls."

Broadley said the Anti-Inflation Board's decisions have been inconsistent with the economic realities of the province and inconsistent from one wage decision to the next.

He said the federation now is turning the board's own primary weapons against it — "Harassment and obstruction, which is what the AIB has been using against us."

The B.C. government on June 23 passed legislation turning teachers and other public service wage contracts over to the jurisdiction of the Anti-Inflation Board on a retroactive basis.

On Nov. 15, the deadline for settling 1976 contracts, only 39 school districts had reached agreement and the balance must have these arbitrated by Dec. 31. Negotiations for 1977 contracts is due to start almost immediately.

Barrett Releases His Shadow Cabinet

Opposition leader Dave Barrett Tuesday released the New Democratic Party's shadow cabinet.

He said he issued the list now to try to tell people that British Columbia "is in an economic crisis ... led by a government adrift when leadership is needed."

In the shadow cabinet, only three NDP MLAs have positions related to ministries they held in the previous administration's cabinet.

Alex Macdonald is critic of the attorney-general's department, Gary Lauk will be economic development minister Don Phillips' critic and Dave Stupich is finance critic.

Barbara Wallace (Cowichan-Malahat) becomes agriculture critic, Norman Levi (Vancouver-Burrard) switches to consumer and corporate affairs, Dennis Cocke (New Westminster) moves to education; Don Lockstead (Mackenzie) takes over as critic of energy, transport and communications and Robert Skelly (Alberni) covers environment.

Others are: William King (Revelstoke-Slocan), forests; Christopher D'arcy (Rossland-Trail), health; Emery Barnes (Vancouver Centre), highways and public works; Charles Barber (Victoria), housing and municipal affairs; Rosemary Brown (Vancouver Burrard), human resources; Karen Sandford (Comox), labor; Graham Lea (Prince Rupert), mines and petroleum resources; Eileen Dailly (Burnaby North), provincial secretary and travel, and Lorne Nicholson (Nelson-Creston), recreation and conservation.

House leader for the NDP during the next session will be King, who filled in as party leader for Barrett after his defeat in the Dec. 11 general election last June.

Wastrels Out of Control

When a government is accused of gross neglicence in the control of Canadian taxpayers' funds and responds by appointing a $1,000-per-day royal commission to report on the matter 13 months hence the country is at rock bottom. Not only is spending out of control, the government is out of control. As Auditor-General J. J. Macdonnell said in tabling his studies and recommendations: "I firmly believe that public funds are, in effect, trust funds and must be treated accordingly."

A government that can shrug off these recommendations which the auditor general called "critically serious" is a government that shows contempt for the people who elected it. Yes, these revelations about the Trudeau administration's spendthrift nature will hurt the government, as one Liberal backbencher admitted. And this blow to the government's rusting prestige comes at a critical time in our history. So why didn't the prime minister immediately appoint the financial watchdog Macdonnel recommended and implement a tightening up process? The plain and simple answer is the government appears to have lost its will. In the parlance of Richard Nixon it will "stonewall" the situation, creating a special royal commission. Three of the four members of this commission have direct conflicts of interest. One is a former top bureaucrat — the kind of person who is spending taxpayers' money. Another wrote a book praising Canada's public service, while a third was chairman of a private advisory group that led to $60,000 per year salaries for senior government bureaucrats. This administration is beyond belief. First it studiously ignores the recommendations of its auditor-general and then it has the gall to appoint a biased commission. How much will the public take of such cynicism?

In an organization that plans to spend $41.2 billion during the current fiscal year, some waste, through stupidities, oversights and the sheer scale of spending is inevitable. Yet a crown corporation that pays $10.5 million to nuclear power station promoters in two foreign countries "without adequate documentation" should explain itself. Even applying the government's own office requirement guidelines the auditor-general concluded the bureaucracy occupies 30 per cent more space than it should, and that when the annual price tag on administration rents is $249 million.

A perfect example of what the auditor-general is talking about — the day after Macdonnell reported these figures the Times received six copies of Co-operation Canada, a slick magazine put out by the Canadian International Development Agency and four copies of a 27-page speech by CIDA President Paul Gerin-Lajoie. Such incredible redundancy across the land is costing Canadian taxpayers' thousands of needless dollars. Indeed, spending and accountability are out of control as the auditor-general stated in his carefully-worded statement.

Numbed by a series of government financial misadventures, a long-suffering electorate will probably accept Ottawa's evasion on this matter. This administration's apathy is reflected in the nation's eyes. We have become so used to waste in our personal lives we hardly notice the government's excesses. Thrift was once a virtue in Canada's civil service. Now the bureaucrats spend with wild abandon and there is upwards of $20 billion in outstanding consumer credit.

This issue should not be allowed to become moribund in the deep freeze of a royal commission. If the Trudeau administration can't account for itself, it must at least account for our money as it aimlessly flounders towards what now appears inevitable disaster.

ALVIN SANOFF

Carter in the Heartland

DAYTON, Ohio — I am 35. White. Middle-class. A suburbanite. I own two cars and one-fourth of a ranch house. The bank owns the rest.

Most people with my demographics are Republicans. But I am not. I am one of the relatively few registered Democrats in my neighborhood on the outskirts of Dayton. I sometimes feel as though I ought to wear a bell around my neck to warn the neighbors as I pass by.

I don't believe that the pollsters, pundits and prognosticators who have come to regard Dayton as a microcosm of Middle America have ever visited my neighborhood. But they should. For it is probably as typical a Middle-American suburban as any neighborhood can be.

All Middle Class

The houses aren't ticky-tacky, but they're not posh. Many ethnic groups are represented. There are Italians and Germans, Russians, Irish and English. But most of the people are two and three generations removed from the old country. Many of them are second-generation suburbanites.

Accountants and engineers, tool-and-die makers and insurance salesmen, lawyers and government employees — all these live in my neigborhood. And all are middle class, with incomes between $15,000 and $30,000.

It is not a wealthy area, although many of the residents hope eventually to attain affluence. But by conventional standards, my neighbors are comfortable. Yet many of them don't feel comfortable. Some have extended their credit to the breaking point and beyond. A few can't even afford to buy furniture to fill up their three- and four-bedroom ranch homes.

My neighbors are climbing the economic ladder. Many are afraid of falling off. They worry about higher taxes and about government programs that will take from them and give to those less well off. They feel that they are just making it now and don't have anything extra to spread around. On election day, 73 per cent of my neighbors cast their votes for Gerald Ford.

They don't talk much about why they voted as they did. In fact, they don't talk much about politics at all. The conversation runs more to lawns and baseball.

But it doesn't take much insight to understand why my neighbors voted for the candidate who promised less government and lower taxes. They want to keep what they have, and they are fearful of the unknown.

My six-year-old son summed up the prevailing sentiment when I asked him why he had cast his ballot for Mr. Ford in his school's mock election. "If Carter wins," he said, "it'll mean higher taxes." I asked him where he got that idea since he hadn't picked it up at home. "My friends said so," he told me. He's already internalizing neighborhood values.

The fact that my attitudes are different and that I was among the 27 per cent in my precinct who voted for Jimmy Carter does not make me any better than my neighbors. It doesn't mean that I am wealthier or enjoy paying taxes. But it may mean that I have a greater concern about the world outside my suburban subdivision. There is a need to look beyond one's neighborhood in defining what is good for the society. Yet, I see people becoming more and more selfish, defining the common good in egocentric terms.

Broader View

For many of my neighbors, the world stops at suburbia's edge. They spend their lives in isolation from the black and the poor. Many of them work, play and shop in suburbia. Slums and ghettos are outside the realm of their experience.

Maybe it's my urban background — I grew up in the Bronx and Boston — that causes me to look at the world differently than my neighbors do. Or maybe it has to do with my father's Democratic leanings or with my experiences as a journalist.

Whatever the reason, I know that I don't share the political views of most of my neighbors. Many of them have a cramped view of the common good. Persuading them to take a broader view is one of Jimmy Carter's major challenges. I wish him luck.

Len Guy's 'Victory'

Len Guy last weekend proved he could hang onto his job as secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, but at a very high cost. In public at least, he indicated that there would be very little compromising with the large dissident movement in the Fed. But that's exactly the skill Guy is going to have to learn in the next two years.

And it's straight common sense to try to accommodate the unions representing 40 per cent of the votes against Guy's leadership at the federation's annual meeting in Vancouver.

For anyone else, the fact that an outsider such as Art Kube, who has been in B.C. only two years, could come so close to dumping Guy would be a powerful factor for change. But Guy said he's getting too old to change. Maybe he was joking, but it seems likely that unless Guy does change his methods of operating, his tactics of confrontation, they will be changed for him two years hence by a dissident group with a lot more time to organize his defeat.

Even to Guy, it should be clear that the methods of recent years only play into the hands of the elected politicians. It may be ideologically satisfying to defy the government to do its worst, but increasingly public opinion sides with officialdom and not with the erstwhile underdog unions. Recount just a few of the recent work stoppages — the supermarket shutdown, the CUPE strike locally, the post office strike a year ago — and ask where 95 per cent of public sympathy lay.

Len Guy and organized labor need to ask that question of themselves, and why the public is willing to support legislative measures against labor. All the tough, defiant talk in the world isn't going to help unions and their membership in the face of overwhelming public opposition such as recent events have suggested.

Wallace Rapped

The continuing controversy over the Helmcken hospital site seems to centre around statements being made by Dr. Scott Wallace.

The latest in the Wallace fixation was following the meeting of the Capital Regional Board, when Dr. Wallace berated the board for its action in giving unanimous consent to a motion on the Helmcken site.

I am sure the directors on the Capital Regional Board are far more representative of the feelings of the people, and expressed this opinion in their vote.

How many remember, during the last session of legislature on the floor of the house during debate, it was revealed the land for the McKenzie site was owned by a personal friend of Dr. Wallace?

It is quite evident that the minister of health, in making his decision on the Helmcken site, has considered the large area the hospital must service for both the Western Community and Greater Victoria Municipalities.

For this I am most thankful. — K. D. Williams, Victoria.

Poor, Not Cheap

I notice in the (Cheapskate City, Nov. 19) Times that Joe Landon is trying to "rake old folks over the coals."

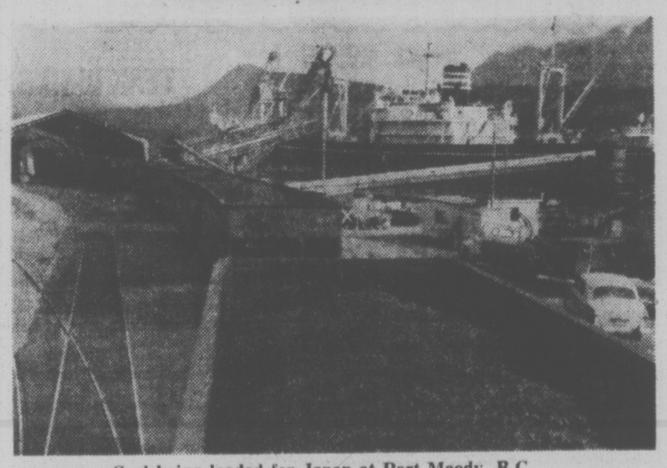
I wonder if Joe Landon (United Way director) is an old age pensioner, like a greater part of the population of Greater Victoria is? We old age people have raised and educated our families (has he one?) through more than one war. Many luxuries were scarce for us, then and now. We paid our taxes etc. too and still do. We still pay school tax when our children have children. We paid our share and many can barely exist, so why should Joe Landon come down on Victoria? We're practically an "old folks' town." I resent his attitude and know others do too.

If Joe doesn't like our "cheapskate city" he can move out any time! — An Old Folk.

Capital Punishment

People are talking, quite bitterly at times, about restoring capital punishment. You seem to me the fairest of papers, willing to show both sides of a question.

Former warden Hugh Christie of the Oakalla prison was so successful in his efforts to rehabilitate the prisoners that he was snatched away by the United Nations to show other countries how to do it. We seem to have regressed since then and our overcrowded and understaffed prisons are in trouble. But according to Mr. Christie and other experienced penologists, restoring hanging would not solve the problems.—Caroline M. Riley, Vancouver.



Coal being loaded for Japan at Port Moody, B.C.

Keep Our Coal

Hot on the heels of the Prime Minister's kissing excursion to Japan, comes reports that B.C. Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has toured the land of the rising sun "begging" industries there to accept millions of tons of B.C. coal.

Considering that the province of B.C. collects the princely sum of a whole $1.50 per ton in royalties on export coal while other provinces are picking up as much as $9, it would appear that Mr. Phillips did not have to bend too low in front of Japanese officials to ensure it is B.C. coal that is fed into the blast furnaces of their steel mills.

The people of B.C. would seemingly be much better served by Mr. Phillips if he ceased his back bending activities abroad and stayed home to lend a hand in finding a solution to the ever increasing unemployment problems of this province, which certainly are not being helped by continuing the policy of past Socred administrations and giving away all our natural resources.

Please stay home, Mr. Phillips, before all our coal is given away, for the energy crisis is increasing its value every day as after all it is a raw renewable resource and there are still many large cold winters ahead to be faced by British Columbia.—C. Blair, 939 Reeve Place.

Fight On, Bill

With the troublesome times the country is experiencing presently, and so many politicians "pussyfooting" for votes, it is indeed a refreshing change to hear Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm's reaction to the Quebec election result.

Looks like he put the cat among the pigeons. And would like to make sure the pigeons will have no roost to come home to.

Atta boy, Bill, I don't favor your political party, but I sure endorse your sentiments.

As the well-known religious body would say, fight the good fight with all our might. — Walter Say, 3218 Alder Street.

Obsolete Theories

In the latest development in Britain, Prime Minister Callaghan, has urged Japan, Germany and the U.S. to lend Britain $10 or $12 billion to be used not only to ease the current crisis, but to enable Britain to carry out long range plans to increase production without cutting back on the present welfare system.

The PM does not deny that the loan would not be economically justified, but he urged them to ignore the advice of their treasury officials and make the loan on political grounds only. Implicit is the threat to withdraw Britain from NATO if Britain does not get the loan, something which could only give comfort to the USSR.

The promise to achieve greater productivity is somewhat contradictory in view of the fact the government is planning to nationalize the shipyards and the aircraft industry, as it is a fact of history that nationalization always results in lower production, not greater.

To ask the solvent nations to finance bankrupt and obsolete socialist theories is a rather humiliating situation and one for which the U.K. labor party must take full responsibility. It is almost unbelievable that Britain should beg the solvent world to support obsolete and repugnant socialist theories. If her ideas are sound, why does she have to borrow from the world of free enterprise?—M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra Street.

Not Oafs

In reply to Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace, who, at the convention of the Progressive Conservative party held in Victoria, referred to our Committee for Western Independence in terms less than complimentary.

I wish to say to Dr. Wallace that we are not bigots, radicals, melodramatic or ignorant oafs! We are sane, sensible, well-informed and educated people from all walks of life and all professions and trades. We have attempted to deal with the federal government as well as the provincial government in every legitimate manner only to be given the cold shoulder as they have given the cold shoulder to everything pertaining to the west for the past 100 years.

We hope that the people of Western Canada remember that we are the loyal Canadians and loyal to our queen. We still have faith in the Union Jack and the red ensign under which so many of us fought in three wars and we would like to see that Union Jack and the Red Ensign returned to their rightful place even though we will add to that Red Ensign a coat of arms of the commonwealth of Western Canada, on the diagonal position. This flag will give to us once again a pride and patriotism and for those of our armed forces an esprit de corps today so sadly lacking.

Levesque won and it is not over as so many believe, because Rene Levesque is far too intelligent to make the move of withdrawing Quebec from Confederation because he knows the great indebtedness hanging over Quebec which they could in no way repay, and he will not kill the goose that lays the golden egg. So, again we have the situation where the people will be led into believing that all is well and that we can get things straightened out and that the central government will again help us and make this a better place to live in. Let this not fool you because the central government in Ottawa is dominated and will be dominated as it has been in the past and they will, in no way, listen to our voices from the west, anymore than they have in the past.—Col. Paul L. Burton, Executive Secretary and Treasurer, Committee for Western Independence, P.O. Box 5008, Station B, Victoria, V8R 6N3.

Talent Exchange

Last night (Nov. 19) it was our privilege to hear the performances of four outstanding Soviet Ukrainian artists at the Royal Theatre. The respective individuals and governments involved in the organization of the Canadian-USSR cultural exchanges are to be congratulated on their choice of these performers who presented a varied program of operatic and Ukrainian folk songs to a warm and receptive audience.

Unfortunately, artists from 14 republics of the Soviet Union have been consistently and wrongly labelled Russians. Regrettably, the working language of those republics is Russian. Perhaps it can be conjectured that with the appearance of these Ukrainian artists, the policy of ruxsification implemented throughout the Soviet republics by the Soviet government has undergone favorable modifications. Surely, every ethno-cultural group has the immutable right of developing and retaining its own identity!

We support the policy underlying the Canada-USSR cultural exchanges in which each Soviet republic is given the opportunity of presenting, in their native language, their unique art form. We trust that in the future Canadian audiences can look forward to performances of other talented artists from other Soviet republics.—R. Ilnytzky, spokesperson, Ukrainian-Canadian Cultural Committee of Greater Victoria, 1560 Despard Avenue.

Micmac Reunion

Could we please use your columns to contact the ex-crew members of the Canadian destroyer HMCS Micmac?

Next year will be the 30th anniversary of the Micmac collision, it is thought by some that this would be a worthy occasion on which to hold a reunion of all ex-shipmates of HMCS Micmac who sailed in her before and after the collision.

To this end, the committee is attempting to ascertain the wishes and addresses of ex-members who are interested in renewing old acquaintances, talking over old times and splicing the mainbrace once more.

Let your wishes be known to — HMCS Micmac Reunion Committee, 25 Wanda Lane, Dartmouth, N.S., B2W 3G4.

Fitting Flag

Golly gee whiz, according to his letter, Terry Eastwood just found out this year that those folks in Quebec can be pretty nice and good company too. Ain't that somethin'?

He sure doesn't have much use for a lot of other people though. Back in Winnipeg where I came from, no matter where you came from in the first place, if it wasn't the right place, everybody hated everybody else, according to some people. Thinking back to the 1930s, nobody knew which tribe my family belonged to because our name was different from everybody else's and we used to often get called other names. Funny thing about people, some of them who yelled the loudest about others being bigots were pretty good at being that themselves.

As for that Canadian history we used to get at school, it was so darn boring the way it was written and taught, who gave a darn anyway? A person can learn more about this country reading books published in the 19th century and enjoy reading 'em too.

What's Mr. Eastwood so mad at Mr. Richardson for? I have to laugh when Mr. Trudeau talks about keeping the country together for Canadians. Lester Pearson should have had a flag designed with the word multinational on it. Would have been more fitting.—Still Laughing.

Blackmail

What is the world coming to when political blackmail is being used to hold up the building of a hospital in my community?

I have seen children pull a similar stunt in their childhood games when one child has the ball and bat while the other child has the yard to play in.

The minister of health has stated the new hospital will be built on the Helmcken site.

According to Saanich this site will cost Saanich dollars in order to upgrade services in that part of the municipality.

It would appear that the Saanich representatives on the Capital Regional Board hold more votes than those of the western representatives and are using these votes as a club to receive funds from the provincial government to offset municipality costs in upgrading services in the approaches to the Helmcken site.

As a resident of the western community I find this ludicrous.

For the building of this hospital to be held up for this reason is shameful.

Have these people lost sight of the need for this hospital for all people in order to justify the non-upgrading of adjacent services in the past?

Come on children, let's get on with the building of this badly-needed facility. — J. C. Johnson, 2635 Selwyn Road.

Tough Consumer Law In Quebec Limbo

By EVAN EVANS-ATKINSON
The Sun

Although the dust is at last settling after the Quebec election, the fate of the defeated Liberal government's Bill 7 still hangs in the balance.

You may recall that Bill 7 is proposed consumer legislation that would severely restict credit advertising and totally ban commercial advertising directed at children under 13.

Canada's breakfast food manufacturers went up the wall when it was first proposed — no more touting of sugar-coated cereals to the little folk. And, horrors, the ban would even extend to what is written on the cereal boxes themselves.

The TV industry went up the wall, too. So did Canada's toy manufacturers. And many others. Our kiddies are big business.

But the really heavy breathing came from the banks and big department stores — their credit-card advertising was in danger.

In fact, everyone was so upset that the advertising industry in Quebec panicked and formed a well-funded association to fight the bill.

Of course, the Liberal's consumer affairs minister, Lise Bacon, has now lost her job. She was defeated by some 2,000 votes by a Parti Québecois candidate in the Bourassa riding in Montreal.

But this does not mean the legislation is dead. In the practical world of politics, no party is above pinching a good idea from its predecessor and later humbly accepting credit for it.

We must remember that in B.C., after the NDP was rudely interrupted, the next consumer affairs minister, Rafe Mair, took over much of the legislation that was already in the works. It has since become law. The Trade Practices Act is an example.

Given the Parti Quebecois' apparent propensity for being more interested in working people than in big bisiness, there is a good chance that it will do the same with Bill 7.

If it does, it will be only a matter of time before other provinces follow the leader in much the same way that other provinces quickly followed B.C.'s pioneering consumer legislation a couple of years ago.

Considering that a strict application of Bill 7 might even force supermarkets to move their Crackerjack displays above the eye-level of a four-year-old, it's worth watching.

The part of Bill 7 that freaked the banks and department stores was Article 161, which reads:

"No person shall use advertising to advise consumers of goods and services obtainable through credit plans offered to them."

This would mean an end to the sort of TV jingle that cheerfully encourages consumers to get the things that really count, and displays of high-priced recreational equipment in banks.

Since B.C. consumers already have an average personal debt of $2,000 each and historically have been piling it up four times faster than their incomes have increased, Bill 7 is most certainly worth watching.

The Ogilvy and Mather national advertising agency recently did a study that involved putting 197 questions on daily life to a cross-section of French-Canadian and English-Canadian women.

The idea was to find out whether French-Canadian women see the world differently from their English-Canadian counterparts, and to use this informatin to guide future advertising campaigns in Quebec.

Here are some of the findings:

The English-Canadian woman, not the French, is more likely to rely on emotions in decision-making.

The French-Canadian is more liberal and decidedly less prudish than her English counterpart.

French-Canadian women place far higher value on cleanliness than the English.

Although the attitudes of French-Canadian women are more liberal and more liberated than those of English-Canadians, home-making is not rejected.

The French-Canadian woman is far more likely to be skeptical and mistrustful of individuals and business.

Separation Cost Would Be High

By DOUGLAS LEPAN

(LePan is a poet and professor at the University of Toronto)

The changes facing Canada as a nation are grave and massive. In my opinion, the risk of Canada becoming separated must now be regarded as an immediate and present danger.

Some Canadians affect to be undaunted by that prospect. It does not surprise me that Rene Levesque and his party in Quebec profess to believe that separation could be worked out fairly readily and easily. After all, they have been saying that for quite some time now.

What does surprise me is that English-speaking Canadians — and it would seem in increasing numbers — are now beginning to say, "Let them go!" Have they ever considered what the problems would be of governing a country that would still include the Atlantic provinces and all the provinces from Ontario to British Columbia but that would be divided by a huge wedge driven into it by a newly independent and separate country?

Have they ever considered the chaos that would result from the snapping of all the ties that now run clear across the continent and join all the provinces together? Have they ever considered how difficult it would be to try to splice all these filaments together again in some new, and inevitably more awkward, fashion?

I am appalled by the nonchalance and naivety of such English-speaking Canadians, who now seem to be encouraged more and more to come to the surface. But their naivety is only slightly greater than that of the members of the Parti Quebecois who tell us that an economic union between newly independent Quebec and what would then be left of Canada would not be too difficult to negotiate.

I wish someone would explain to Rene Levesque and his friends that divorce or separation is almost never amicable, that it is almost always followed by great bitterness, and that relations between the separated partners are at best distant and at worst poisonous. Working out an economic union in that atmosphere would be next to impossible.

But I also wish that someone with influence and authority in this old province of Ontario would tell the people of Quebec that there are thousands, hundreds of thousands, yes, perhaps millions of citizens of Ontario who have not given up on Canada; who have not given up on a Canada stretching from sea to sea, one and indivisible, but with French as one of its two official languages and with room for a special place in it for Quebec; who may have been silent too long but who have never wavered in that faith; and who are prepared to pay the price that may be required.

Part of the price is the degree of official bilingualism that is now being implemented. Another part of the price may be a much larger degree of unofficial and personal bilingualism, which will come much more gradually but which may ultimately involve almost every university graduate in the country.

I believe there are millions of Canadians who are willing to pay a price of such dimensions to keep Canada united. I wish to God that someone with far more influence and authority than I would try to get that message through to the people of Quebec before it is too late.

StatsCan: A Bureaucratic Mess

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Statistics Canada, or StatsCan, once known as the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, has been losing a sterling reputation for integrity and efficiency. It's a bit like — though it happened later — the plunge from busy national purpose to an unsavory, bureaucratic mess which overtook the CBC as the idealism of its radio period petered away in television.

StatsCan began in 1918. Its purpose was and is "to compile, analyze and publish statistical information relative to the commercial, industrial, financial, social and general condition of the people and to conduct a census of population and agriculture."

The agency is headed by Dr. Peter Kirkham, chief statistician of Canada. He's had the job only two years. He reports to the minister of industry, trade and commerce. Today that's Jean Chretien.

StatsCan has 5,700 employees. This year it will spend some $100 million. It is essentially a service agency, not a policy-planning or "staff" agency. That is, it should be a kind of factory producing sound, up-to-date statistics.

There's some irony that in recent years the agency has grown enormously. In a decade the number of employees has more than doubled and the annual budget has jumped six-fold. The irony comes when we think about the computers and the copiers, much mooted as savers of time and man-years, which have proliferated at StatsCan. So have "executives". Since the major reorganization, begun by Dr. Ostry, chief statistician from 1972 to 1975, the number of "executives" more than doubled.

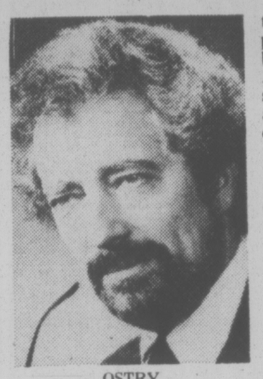
In crude terms, then, the government has not spared money, manpower and executive salaries at StatsCan. Yet the agency seems to be disorganized. That's becoming apparent as facts dribble out in Parliament about conflicts of interest, nepotism and low morals.

An inquiry, perhaps a parliamentary inquiry, seems called for. If a relatively "neutral" — i.e., not highly political-government operation like StatsCan has fallen from a state of quiet and a good repute for efficiency in a very short time, there must be lessons (and corrections) to be drawn from discerning how and why it came about.

My gall at proposing an inquiry has not come suddenly. About five years ago one began to hear the chatter about confusion and power struggles at StatsCan. In late August, 1975, I published excerpts from a long memo written by a senior official of StatsCan, Frank Curry. Curry took early retirement. At leaving he put in his detailed critique to Dr. Kirkham. It described an institution falling apart.

The public reaction of Dr. Kirkham and his minister, Alistair Gillespie, was calm and defusing. Minor stuff, nothing to get excited about, (there seemed a suggestion that Curry was both old-fashioned and disgruntled at being passed by). In sum, the "cover-up". I offered to send

KIRKHAM
... TOP MAN



OSTRY
... launched expansion

copies of Curry's memo to readers. I was surprised to get more than 300 requests. (After all, it was 7,000 words long, and rather complex and "inside" in its arguments.)

What bowled me over in the mail; and even more in some of the letters which came after some correspondents had read the Curry memo, was the depth of animosity and cynicism about StatsCan's efficiency, particularily in those who had to feed it information.

A manufacturer wrote: "Most of the questions we cannot possibly answer without changing our entire bookkeeping system ... It is useless spying which costs our industry at least $5 million a year ..."

A bookkeeper wrote: "... data I am expected to forward to Statistics Canada makes much extra work — I appear less efficient than I am and I can't fathom what they do with the data."

An officer in a data processing firm wrote: "I suspect that Curry's allegations will prove to be correct." An economics professor wrote: "I have a few beefs regarding StatsCan ..." A doctor wrote: "It has always struck me as an unfortunate anomaly that StatsCan can document the number of peaches tinned in Ontario or the number of screwdrivers imported from Hong Kong but can't tell me the income distributions over age 65 in Westmount or othe incidence of infectious diseases in Montreal." A businessman wrote: "Curry deserves our thanks ... He shows StatsCan suffers from the growing problem of general industry — a lack of appreciation by top management of the forces that really motivate those who work for them."

My hunch is that a good inquiry would demonstrate StatsCan suffers from the problem which Dr. Bandeen is carving at on the CNR — too many chiefs, not enough Indians.

A top-heavy executive structure, too many high-salaried, well-educated, under-used, rank-and-perquisite-conscious officers, topped by a boss who has lost control because the structure is too complex for him, not least because he's a relative outsider.

Unlock the Voting Booth

russell baker

I wish public scolds would ease up on the poor devils among the electorate who didn't vote Nov. 2.

Non-participants have hardly been able to pen a newspaper or light the tube lately without being subjected to the abuse of high-minded experts on the democratic condition.

All this non-voting, they say, will be the end of democracy if it isn't stopped. I doubt it. I think democracy will go on pretty much as it always has, for better or worse, leaving us, as usual, at the mercy of Providence and maniacs.

The notion that a small vote will do us in seems far-fetched, considering all the authentic menaces besetting us. The people who argue the point are probably driven to overstatements by the fact that Messrs. Ford and Carter gave them so little of substance to occupy their minds and tongues.

The facts about non-voting are more interesting than the critics suggest with their talk about public cynicism and callousness toward the democratic tradition.

One fact is that the American system had always operated on the assumption that it is unhealthy to have too many people voting. Another fact is that, to prevent this unhealthy situation from arising, the system has always deliberately made it very hard for people to vote. It still does.

The history is too well known to merit a long recitation here. It is enough to note that beginning with the exclusion of black persons and women from the electing process, the American system viewed the electorate as a privileged elite. Efforts to gain admission to the voting club have ever since been vigorously resisted by the guardians of democracy. Women were kept out until the present century. Laws to exclude blacks in many states survived into the 1960s.

The system's disinclination to admit new members is understandable enough. The system, of course, is made up of persons elected to operate the system. Once a person gets elected, why should he wish to change the composition of a constituency which has been wise enough to put him in office?

Quite naturally, he reasons that any electorate that elects him and must be the best of all possible electorates. He becomes uneasy when someone proposes that strangers be admitted. Such people could be ignorant, hot-headed, foolish ... dangerous. The law must be fashioned to guard against such people.

And this, of course, is the way the law is still fashioned. The more blatant methods for keeping people from voting have been gradually tucked away in the history books, but the subtle devices for keeping the vote small continue to do the job.

The aim of these devices is to make it hard for people to vote, to make it so hard that the politicians will not have to fret about any but the most resolute of citizens.

Among the obstacles to voting in the U.S. are the registration laws. To the timid these pose difficulties of which our more learned commentators seem unaware. You have to know that you can't vote unless you are registered. Many people don't know that.

Many of those who do know it don't know when, where or how to register, or how to find out. The registration office may be open only during a person's working hours. Getting there may require a trip across town, hours off from the job.

During the 1930s I had an uncle who despised Franklin Roosevelt as an abomination from Satan. He never voted against Roosevelt, however. He was a man of great pride. He could not bear to admit to anyone that he did not know how to register to vote, and so, he never asked anyone how to do it, and so, he never registered and never voted, and Roosevelt won four straight elections.

If the American system really depended upon heavy voter participation, it would be easily obtained. The use of registration as a device to prevent people from voting can be readily abolished.

A bill calling for registration by postcard was before Congress this fall. It would have made it easier for many more people to vote. Not surprisingly, Congress let it die.

In such a big country, there is no reason why the voting should be confined to a single day. A simple constitutional amendment could permit the polls to stay open a week.

There is no reason why the business must be settled within a constricting time span. An election is not a football game. The tight time limit on voting gives a big advantage, however, to the organized candidate with the resources to get his vote to the polls. We are not likely to see this fellow voting for amendments which will destroy his advantage.

Not likely. American politics has always flourished on the small vote. It is unnatural to expect the system to change now simply because Messrs. Carter and Ford had less to stimulate the non-participants than most previous candidates they haven't voted for or against.

Closing basic price of 1000-ounce certificates in the Victoria area $4.34 U.S. bid per troy ounce and $4.37 asked. Previous day $4.39 and $4.42.

R. Angus Firm Sold

The long-established Victoria auto equipment wholesale company of R. Angus Ltd. at 920 Johnson has been bought by Vancouver businessman Jim Mercier.

Established in 1919, the Victoria company also has branches in Nanaimo and Vancouver.

Mercier declined to give the selling price and David Angus, former president of the company, could not be reached for comment.

With the acquisition of R. Angus Ltd., Mercier, at 35, heads the third biggest collection of companies in the province in this field.

He purchased the Vancouver company of Productions Supply Co. Ltd. initially.

"That company was established in 1935 and, like R. Angus Ltd. all the companies I've acquired I've purchased from the original owners," Mercier said.

On Aug. 3 of this year, Mercier also acquired two more Vancouver companies, Motor Car Parts and Industrial Supplies Ltd. and Pacific National Distributors Ltd.

Mercier now has 125 employees.

AIB Controls Reduce Salaries

TORONTO (CP)—The federal anti-inflation program has effectively curbed salary increases, a survey by a management consulting firm shows.

Results show that between August, 1975, and August, 1976, salary increases averaged 9.9 per cent for workers of employers surveyed who are regulated by the Anti-Inflation Board.

Employers not subject to the controls awarded increases averaging 11.7 per cent, the survey shows.

The survey by Stevenson and Kellogg Ltd. of Toronto includes salary data on about 430,000 employees of 307 companies and government agencies in Metropolitan Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

Of the employers replying to the survey, about 80 per cent are subject to the anti-inflation controls.

Projected salary increases for the 12 months to August, 1977, range from an average of 7.9 per cent for employers subject to the controls to 9.1 per cent for employers who are exempt.

The survey says that "after three years of double-digit inflation and a year of controls, salaries in Western Canada and Ontario are still on the upswing."

"However, the rate of increase is substantially less than last year's 13- to 17-per-cent figures, and is likely to be slowed further next year — presuming continuation of the controls program."

COURT CURBS SEC POWER

NEW YORK (CP) — A United States appeals court has curbed the power of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to suspend trading in certain stocks under investigation for an indefinite number of successive 10-day periods.

The decision came in a law suit brought by a suspended New York broker who had extensive dealings in shares of Canadian Javelin Ltd., a Montreal-based natural resources exploration company.

The court ordered the SEC to discontinue its use of successive 10-day suspension orders aimed at stopping trading in a security for an indefinite period.

The opportunity to grow. For this man it's as close as his nearest IAC leasing and financing consultant. At IAC we know a lot about growing. And so we should. In a little more than fifty years, IAC has grown to become one of Canada's leading financial institutions. More important to this man, we know a lot about the construction business. The IAC leasing and financing consultant this man will talk to is a pro. Straight and to the point he'll show this man the differences between leasing and financing and the advantages of both. He'll show this man how a custom tailored plan can work hand in hand with peak cash flow periods. But most of all he'll give this man what he came for. He'll put money in action. And at IAC, that's what we're all about.

99-Year-Old Among 5,710 Turning Out for Flu Shots

A total of 5,710 people, most of them elderly, turned out for flu shots at clinics Friday and Saturday in the Capital district, the regional health officer said Tuesday.

Dr. Allan Arneil said he has had no reports of adverse reactions beyond slight headaches and reddened arms in a few cases, which was expected.

Oldest patient immunized was a 99-year-old man.

The clinics, inspired by the potential threat of swine flu and first of their kind in the district, went smoothly because the public health staff organized well, he said.

The vaccine provides protection aginst both swine flue and a Victoria strain which was prevalent locally last year. Arneil said he expects an outbreak of the Victoria-type flu to arrive in December. Meanwhile there is a good deal of flu-like sickness around already.

Only people 65 and over or others with a chronic condition which would be aggravated by catching the flu were eligible for the initial clinics.

Arneil said the remaining 6,000 doses from the first allotment of 11,000 received this month will be distributed to eligible patients in hospitals, the larger boarding homes or on home care programs.

More vaccine of the region's total allotment of 30,000 doses is expected early in December. Priority for distributing it has yet to be settled by the provincial government, he said. The vaccine is given free.

Five Spans Planned Up-Island

Two tenders for five new bridges on the Island Highway north of Campbell River will be called early next year, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday.

He said in a news release the first contract will be for a three-span, 291-foot structure at Adam River, 54 miles north of Campbell River.

A three-span, 169-foot bridge will be built at Eve River, six miles further south.

Fraser said both will be on steel pilings with reinforced concrete and steel the basic structural materials.

The second contract will be for three bridges, a single-span, 97-foot structure over the Stowe River, 39 miles north of Campbell River. Three miles further north at Lower Elk River, an 86-foot single-span bridge will be built, with a 122-foot single-span structure across Upper Elk River, four miles away, completing the five-bridge series.

ROCK BANDS HERE

Two Vancouver rock bands will appear in Victoria this week.

The Incredible Sweeney Todd, a five-piece band, and the Karroll Brothers band, a four-member group, will play at the Stardust Cabaret, 1037 View, Thursday through to Saturday.

The two bands, both London Record artists, last appeared together in Victoria at a rock concert at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre in early spring.

Saanich Aldermen Split On Golf Fee Increase

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Two Saanich aldermen will fight a plan to increase Cedar Hill Golf club annual dues to $175 from $125.

The higher rate at the municipally-owned course is scheduled to start in January and council is expected to ratify the move at its Dec. 6 meeting.

But Ald. Fred Severson Tuesday night strongly opposed his own parks and recreation committee recommendation, saying he'd prefer an increase to $150. Ald. Sandy Noeel also will fight the increase. (Other Saanich Council stories on Page 21.)

The only alderman not present was Ald. John McDonald so it appears the proposal has enough support for approval.

The increase is a compromise on the recommendations of recreation administrator Bill Young, who initially proposed that senior and junior annual fees remain at $85 and $40 but regular fees for men and women be hiked to $200.

Young said fees at the municipality-owned Burnaby Mountain course are $200 and only allowed members to play from Monday through to Friday, not every day of the week as at Cedar Hill.

"We raised our fees 10 per cent across the board right through (for other recreation facilities) with the exception of the golfers," Young said. "And, our service is greater than any other in the area."

He quoted fees of the other Greater Victoria course, all higher than Cedar Hill.

"A municipal golf course is to cater to people in the lower income bracket," Noel responded.

He said he recently played on a municipal course in Arizona where green fees are $3 in the summer and $4 in the winter, compared to private clubs in the area that charged anywhere from $15 to $20 a day.

"Compare our facilities to others in this area and ask if we are charging a competitive price . . . we're not," said Ald. David Paterson, "Gorge Vale charges $175 (the lowest of other clubs) and we'd be on a par with the lowest rate in town."

There has been no increase of fees at Cedar Hill for about two years and municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said operating costs have risen 40 per cent in that period.

Severson said, although Saanich has a four-year plan to lengthen the course and improve facilities, at a cost of about $250,000, he would be happier if the $200 fee hike was made over a two-year period.

On the advice of Mayor Ed Lum, who suggested the $175 figure with a prviso that it might be raised in 1978 if necessary, Young will supply council with fee structures of other municipal course in British Columbia.

Earlier in the meeting, the committee recommended $50,000 be taken from the 1975 surplus appropriation fund to be used for construction work on the clubhouse and a new pro shop.

Total cost of the project will be $152,000.

Rod Hood, president of the Cedar Hill golf club, told the committee the club is prepared to contribute $50,000, plus 10 per cent. An additional $25,000 might be added if members agree.

FORESTRY ENTERS NEW ERA

VANCOUVER (CP) — R. G. Rogers, chairman of Crown Zellerbach of Canada, said Tuesday that a wholesale "re-tooling" of B.C. coast forest industry is needed if it is to remain competitive in the international market.

Speaking to a Vancouver service club, Rogers said this is essential if the industry is to maintain its position as the basis of jobs and wealth in B.C.'s economy.

He described this re-tooling as a gigantic, wholesale modernization of the industry's production capacity on the coast.

The industry is facing severe competitive pressure due to rising costs and low profits, Rogers said.

The coastal forest industry is entering a new era, moving from the easy-to-reach valley bottoms to harder-to-reach trees of small size on the mountain slopes and also is starting to handle second growth timber which is smaller and needs more costly handling he said.

While the harvest from the coastal forests is changing, the industry's facilities have not kept pace, Rogers said.

Construction and capital equipment costs have soared and labor costs have risen to the point where the average forest industry employee in B.C. is paid about a dollar an hour more than the same worker in Washington, Rogers said.

He said offsetting factors such as cheap water transportation and lower basic wood costs in some areas are being outweighed by other cost increases.

Rogers said that the Pearse Royal Commission on Forest Resources had covered some oth the pressures faced by the industry and recognized the need for it to remain competitive in international markets.

Trade Suffering, CFI Agrees

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Council of Forest Industries of B.C. has expressed mixed feelings about the recently-released Pearse Royal Commission on the province's forest industry.

Dr. Peter Pearse, a University of B.C. economics professor, conducted a 1½-year study on timber rights and forestry policies.

Council president D. A. S. Lanskail said in a news release Tuesday that the council concurs with the report's statement that the future of the industry depends on its ability to compete in world markets and that its competitiveness is being eroded by high labor costs and poor profit.

A recommendation that the government guard against adding unnecessary costs on the industry and that it examine such things as utilization standards and cost recovery systems to find ways to reduce cost burdens, has the council's approval, Lanskail said.

But some of the recommendations for increased government involvement not only contradict the objective but indicate an increase in the cost Pearse is concerned with, he said.

Lanskail said another element of the report which creates some misunderstaniding is material relating to big and small companies. An efficient industry needs a mix of both — large companies with the major capital required for integrated operations and the independent logging and sawmill operators who are essential for enterprise and balance, he said.

Mr. Lanskail said the council agrees with Dr. Pearse that:

—Administration be site-specific rather than subject to blanket regulation.

—Legislation and contracts be in clear, unambiguous language;

—Rights of appeal be specified;

—Forestry and forest management costs be fully recoverable as soon as possible; and —The forest service be the government agency responsible for final decisions on resource management.

Privilege Claim Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel received no special privileges in 1968 from Ray Williston, minister of lands and forests, Jack Forrest, group vice-president of forestry and building materials, said Tuesday.

The report by Dr. Peter Pearse on the forest industry released Thursday said past government policies have been biased in favor of the corporate giants, and that a company got special treatment from the minister.

"I wish to make it clear that there is no truth whatever to these allegations."

It was explained during the commission hearings that a large number of Macmillan Bloedel's "old temporary tenures" had been renewed in 1968 for various terms, some for as long as 40 years.

"There was nothing secret about what happened in 1968. Other companies in the industry were aware of the situation at the time and this was made plain to Dr. Pearse on more than one occasion."

Student Ferry Operating

NANAIMO — A special ferry service began operating today taking children off Protection Island to schools in the city, three-quarters of a mile across the bay.

The three-week halt in regular ferry service, however, has not ended, and other island residents, especially the elderly without their own boats, remain in isolation.

Joe Kilner, chairman of the Nanaimo school board said Tuesday that special arrangements had been made to provide a ferry to Nanaimo at 8 a.m. from Leeshore Resorts on the island, and from the commercial boat basin dock at 3:30 p.m. back to the island.

About 18 students regularly make the trip for schooling.

Leeshore Resorts had operated a private ferry system for years, but increased insurance rates forced them to stop the service early this month.

Most of the island's 150 residents have their own boats, and there was a suggestion that parents were purposely keeping their children at home in an effort to pressure the school district to build an elementary school on the island.

Several applications were made to keep the private Leeshore Resorts ferry in operation via subsidies.

The Nanaimo Regional District however declined to help, and the department of highways also gave a negative response to a proposal to operate a ferry similar to the Gabriola Island one.

Because Protection Island is within the city limits of Nanaimo, numicipal assistance seems the most logical.

City council has been working for several weeks with the municipal affairs department in Victoria trying to convince the department to provide a grant to support the ferries, but so far no decision has been made.

HOW TO MIX A HORSESHOT

Its name not withstanding, the Horseshot is not a case for the veterinarian, but rather a mixed drink of the Smirnoff school, a sort of Bloody Mary with the extra flavour kick of horse radish.

But the Horseshot is no second runner. With a charm and nip all its own, this great red beauty can keep up with the best of them.

To make a Horseshot, pour 1½ oz. Smirnoff into a tall glass with ice, fill with tomato juice, add horse radish to taste and stir. Sip slowly.

OIL BARON BUYS OBSERVER

LONDON (WP)—In a deal believed unprecedented in the annals of American journalism, American oil company has bought The Observer, one of Britain's most distinguished newspapers.

The new owner is Atlantic Richfield and the purchase was made in a matter of days by the firm's chairman, Robert Anderson of Roswell, N.M.

Anderson's associates say he is buying the Sunday newspaper primarily to preserve its literate, liberal and independent character, and is not seeking a profitable asset for his company's growing domain. The Observer has been losing money for several years.

The 59-year-old oil man and rancher is described by aides as a humanist with a deep concern for the communications field. For the last 10 years, he had been chairman of the Aspen Institute, a Colorado think tank on social issues.

Anderson learned less than two weeks ago that The Observer was on the block, and that the David Astor family which owns it could no longer afford to subsidize the losses. He made his decision to buy in less than a week.

How much the Astor family trust will receive in the sale has not been disclosed. One source close to the deal said it involved "several million pounds" but this may be a conservative estimate. Atlantic Richfield has bought 90 per cent of The Observer's shares.

Until Tuesday, Observer staffers had feared that Astor would sell out to one of two tabloid press lords. The leading bidder was Rupert Murdoch, the Australian who last week bought The New York Post, and saved the dying Sun here by filling it with nudity and sensationalism. His closest competitor was Vere Harmsworth, head of a newspaper chain that features The Mail, a tightly edited tabloid with a decided right-wing flavor.

It is unclear how the staff will react to ownership by an absentee American oil tycoon, although one senior member predicted they would be "overjoyed."

Anderson, it was learned, plans two striking innovations for his new acquisition. He will set up what is called a "working board" to inject fresh ideas on the business side and turn the paper's losses — if all goes well — into profits.

Bitter Issues Face U.K. Gov't

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's Labor government said today it will go ahead with the controversial bill to nationalize aircraft and shipbuilding industries despite bitter opposition in Parliament.

The government said it will go ahead with another proposal certain to cause storms in the already divided Parliament: the granting of self-governing powers to Scotland and Wales which many politicians feel might lead to a break-up of the United Kingdom.

The government's intentions were read by Queen Elizabeth in the ceremonial opening of a new session of Parliament two days after the last session ended in acrimony.

The speech, by tradition, was in the House of Lords, the nonelected upper chamber of mainly Conservative opposition peers which has been resisting some of the government's key legislation in the last few weeks.

As the Queen read from the text prepared by Prime Minister James Calaghan, the Lords heard what amounts to a direct challenge to their historic chamber.

The Lords have been throwing back the nationalization bill with a drastic amendment which would exclude from state takeover 12 profitable repair companies. The Lords' delaying tactics held up the bill until the last session ended, and the measure therefore was lost.

The government's intentions to grant more powers to Scotland and Wales, in answer to rising nationalist feelings, also will bring bitter opposition from many members, including Labor, although some Conservatives will support it.

The bill, expected in a few weeks, will keep sovereignty firmly in London and maintain a firm grip on the North Sea oil being pumped ashore in Scotland.

The Queen said the government aso will introduce legislation providing for the election of British members of the European Assembly.

She said the government would continue its attack on inflation and seek a lasting reduction in unemployment, working in close conjunction with trade unions and employers. Top priority would be given to manufacturing industries.

The Queen's speech pledged continued government co-operation with other countries to maintain sustained economic growth. It said the government would seek further improvements in the operation of the European Economic Community's common agricultural policy.

Fish Project Doubted

VANCOUVER (CP) — There is little point to a proposed $300 million salmon enhancement program if the fish produced are caught by foreign fishermen, the Canadian Institute of Forestry said Monday.

The Vancouver section of the institute made this point in a brief to a pubic inquiry conducted by Environemt Canada into the proposed federal-provincial program.

"There is little point in investing money in increased production and rearing of young salmon if the resulting adult salmon are caught by fishermen from other countries," stated the institute.

"The program must consider the problem of coastal fishing limits for foreign fishermen. Tighter control of the domestic fisheries catch must also be considered while the fish resource is being built up.

"Catch of salmon food species such as herring must also be regulated in our coastal waters."

The inquiry was the last in a series held in 17 loctions in B.C. this month.

Bawlf Report Called Biased

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — City council has branded a recent report on housing and land development in British Columbia as ill-documented and biased toward the lower mainland.

The report, prepared by an 11-member committee headed by Victoria Social Credit MLA Sam Bawlf, recommended several changes in provincial housing policies, including measures to speed up development of land for housing.

"This is a most ill-documented reort," said Ald. Bob Martin. "With one stroke of the pen it says to repeal things like land use contracts. It is full of half-truths and radical changes that could cause no end of trouble."

Ald. Trent Beatty said the report deals mainly with land and housing problems in the lower mainland and not conditions in the Prince George area.

Woman Killed

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Clara Lynn Ross, 25, of Taylor, B.C. was killed early Tuesday when her car slid into the path of a loaded logging truck at mile 39 of the Alaska highway, RCMP said.

2, 4-D Approved

VERNON (CP) — The North Okanagan board of health has given qualified support for the use of the herbicide 2,4-D in controlling weeds in Okanagan Lake. In a brief to the committee studying the weed problem, the board recommended mechanical control be used wherever possible and that 2,4-D be used under strict control in areas where no other remedy is available.

Hunter Missing

PENTICTON (CP) — John Hext, 24, a former Oliver man now living in Vancouver, has been hunted in dense bush 22 miles east of this Okanagan city for two days after being reported missing by two hunting companions.

Davis Defends Leasing Deal

DAVIS
. . . I was defeated

Transportation Minister Jack Davis has defended the North Shore land deal near Vancouver, made when he was federal environment minister, which now is under criticism by the auditor-general.

Davis said Tuesday Ottawa's acquisition of 55 acres is still a good deal for the Squamish Indian Band — from whom the land is leased — and for all the people of the west coast.

He said it is a great site for a Pacific environment centre. What is annoying is that other areas of Canada have federal environment centres but British Columbia does not.

The former federal minister said, "the auditor-general quite rightly is saying 'look, this money was put out to secure the land and nothing has happened.' Well, nothing has happened because I was defeated. And because since then no one could have cared less about developing an environment centre on Canada's west coast."

Davis said the federal acquisition stopped the westward expansion of Vancouver wharves right up to the Lions Gate Bridge, and even if the land stands empty, it's better than having the waterfront filled with industrial development.

He said he hopes that eventually an environment centre will be built on the site.

The chief negotiator for the Squamish Indian Band agrees with Davis that the property being leased by Ottawa represents a good deal for the band.

Squamish Chief Joe Mathias said Tuesday that "it is not the fault of this band at all (that the property is not being used.)"

"The lease is quite clear — it (the land) is to be used for an environment centre," he added.

Mathias said that as chief and a counsellor of the Squamish people his concern is not with federal government waste.

"This is Indian reserve land and my only concern is that the Squamish people are receiving fair value," he said.

"The public I represent is the Squamish people. And it is a reasonable and fair deal as far as the band is concerned."

Asked if the band will permit any other use of the land than as a site for an environmental centre, he said that it "is hard to say until we see what their position is; we haven't received any official plan nor official negotiations."

Vanderhoof Problems Pinned to Drink

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A British Columbia police commission report says that alcohol abuse is the major problem in Vanderhoof, a small community 60 miles west of here.

The report was the result of a request by Vanderhoof town council to examine policing in the community.

The report was later expanded in the wake of an inquest into the death of Coreen Thomas, a native Indian woman who was hit and killed by a car while walking home to the Stoney Creek Reserve on the night of July 3, 1976.

Statistics in the report show that 90 per cent of persons arrested in Vanderhoof in the last year were charged with alcohol-related offences.

The majority of those arrested were native Indians, the report says.

The police commission also heard complaints from Indians about problems with communication with the local RCMP.

Vanderhoof RCMP also were asked to make presentations to the commission.

The RCMP said they did not have the time and resources to patrol the Stoney Creek Reserve as often as desired.

"The police say they respond to every complaint, but do experience some frustrations with native social problems and with Indians who make complaints to police but do not follow them up," the report says.

"In many cases native people are reluctant to attend court and give evidence against people who have harmed them."

The report says Indians said they would like to see native Indians arrested immediately if found drunk, but it also points out that "police find no pleasure in arresting intoxicated persons."

"In the police judgment if the person is not a hazard to himself they (police) tend to be lenient.

"The number of persons arrested for intoxication is very high for a community of 2,700-3,000 people," the report says.

The report recommends police step up enforcement of liquor act infractions, rowdyism and drunkeness in the streets and traffic violations.

It also recommends better communications with the Stony Creek Reserve and a personal advisory committee be established to get feedback from all areas of the Vanderhoof community.

The report was prepared by RCMP officer G. W. Mortimer and Insp. T. R. Fullerton, both members of the police commission.

Inquiries were conducted in September, just prior to the inquest.

Indians Seek Accounting Of Funds

VERNON (CP) — Okanagan Indian bands have called for a federal royal commission to examine operations of the Indian affairs department.

The auditor-general's report this week said that many Indian bands are not properly managing or accounting for their shares of the $100 million annual federal grant for administering Indian affairs programs.

Stewart Phillips, a Penticton Indian band councillor, said Tuesday that only 15 per cent of the money ever gets to Indians and that the balance pays for the 14,000-member Indian affairs bureaucracy, composed largely of non-Indians.

Reynolds Bonneau, manager of the Okanagan Indian band, said the unwarranted criticisms will likely slow whatever plans the department has to transfer administrative responsibility to local bands.

Metric Townhouse Project

The Housing Corporation of British Columbia will build 134 townhouse units on Burnaby Mountain in Greater Vancouver next year, with construction conforming for the first time to full metric specifications.

Metric standards will be required in the construction industry after Jan. 1, 1978, and the Burnaby project will provide industry and governments with a practical assessment of the changeover from feet and inches to metric measurements.

The housing corporation will publish a report of its experiences in building the townhouses. Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will monitor the project throughout its construction.

The units will be the first to be developed on some 200 acres of government-owned land in Harold Winch park on the south slope of Burnaby Mountain.

BCR Plant Layoffs

SQUAMISH (CP) — Railwest Manufacturing Co., a division of the British Columbia Railway, served 72-hour layoff notice Tuesday to 65 afternoon shift workers at its plant here.

Railwest general manager Lloyd Bingham said the company is reducing its production of bulkhead flatcars to three cars a day from five as a result of reduced demand from B.C. Rail.

He said the company has asked Canada Manpower for assistance in re-locating workers affected by the layoffs, which go into effect Friday.

He also said it is hoped some of those affected can be re-hired at the end of the year when the plant begins manufacturing 100 new hopper cars.

PEN RIOT REMAND

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Seven British Columbia Penitentiary prisoners were remanded to Dec. 3 when they appeared in provincial court Tuesday on charges arising from a riot and hostage-taking that began at the federal mixmum-security prison Sept. 28 and ended five days later.

John Gagnon, John Rose, Ralph Saumer, Peter Lubik, Richard Rye and Thomas Shand face charges of unlawful confinement and possession of a dangerous weapon. Gary Lake also was charged with possession of a dangerous weapon.

During the riot, guard Wayne Culbert, 21, was held captive for five days and kitchen worker Walter Day, 50, was held for 25 hours. More than 200 prisoners took part in a rampage that destroyed one wing of the prison.

Under the terms of settlement which ended the riot, Labuik, Rye and Shand were transferred to the Saskatchewan Penitentiary at Prince Albert, and Gagnon, Rose and Saumer to the regional psychiatric centre at Abbotsford.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Cleanup begins today in the recreation building of the British Columbia Penitentiary in the wake of fire damage left by 52 prisoners who had been living in the tin structure since the federal prison was hit by a riot in late September.

Prison spokesman Jack Stewart estimated damage at $50,000 to $100,000.

The building resembled a charred garbage dump during a media tour Tuesday. There was an inch of water from fire hoses on the floor, the interior of the music room adjacent to the stage was burned out, musical instruments were shattered or burned and the floor was littered with hundreds of unopened packages of food, cardboard army ration boxes, foam mattresses, remnants of makeshift tents and torn blankets.

After the September riot and hostage-taking ended, about 200 prisoners were housed in the building in the maximum-security prison on the banks of the Fraser River.

A pipe-bomb explosion, reports of the making of alcohol and a buildup of home-made weapons brought the situation to a head Monday and the remaining 52 prisoners were asked to leave voluntarily by 12:30 p.m. or be taken forcibly to usable cells in the riot-damaged east wing.

The convicts, headed by the prisoners' committee, chose the former course, but to show displeasure at the move prisoners set fires in several locations.

Stewart said the prisoners could have been moved out of the recreation building two months ago but they refused to budge.

He said sections of the east wing are habitable but the plumbing is out of commission and water has to be packed in.

Funding for re-construction has been approved and the wing will be ready by March, Stewart said.

One guard said the prisoners' committee has been living like kings in the recreation offices above the washrooms at the south end of the building.

"They were the elite," he said. "They only came down to mingle with the others once in a while. The committee members were the last ones out. They could be held responsible, in part, for what happened."

TV QUASH BY MAYOR FAILS

SURREY (CP)—Mayor Ed McKitka said Manday that he tried unsuccessfully to have a portion of a recent televised council meeting cut out, and that the attempt was in the "public interest."

Ald. Bonnie Schrenk accused McKitka Monday night of phoning a local cablevision company and asking it to delete a filmed portion of the Oct. 25 council meeting, scheduled for broadcast on Oct. 27.

The cable company refused the mayor's request, however, and broadcast the meeting in its entirety.

That council meeting featured a spat during which McKitka called Mrs. Schrenk a "bumbling idiot" after the alderman disclosed an RCMP report on three school children being harassed by knife-wielding youths and an exhibitionist.

McKitka said he called the RCMP and asked them to review the program and to cut out Mr. Schrenk's revelations if they were not in the public interest.

Home Wreckers Halted

VANCOUVER (CP)—The wrecking crew hit Nils Jensen's apartment building about six weeks ahead of schedule.

City building inspector Peter Engbrecht thought it was a bit too much, so he intervened Monday to keep the wreckers from Jensen's apartment, one of four still occupied in a building slated for demolition on the city's west side.

Jensen, an assistant city prosecutor, had until Dec. 31 to vacate the apartment, but he called in the building inspector after a demolition crew began taking the building apart last week.

"They were treating the place like an abandoned building," he said.

Jensen and five other residents found that outside doors and windows and other fittings in the 18-suite building had been removed.

The tenants decided to take action when they discovered that the wreckers had not turned off gas lines in one area of the building.

Jensen said the fire department turned off the gas and Engbrecht ordered a halt to further demolition on occupied sections.

Men, Woman Charged In Deliveryboy Robbery

Two men and a woman were charged today with attacking and robbing a youth delivering a chicken order to a city apartment Tuesday night.

William Oostland, 24, Alfred Seguin, 24, and Linda M. Barnes, 24, all of 1118 Bay, were remanded without plea to Friday when they appeared in provincial court.

They are charged with robbery with violence and uttering threats of violence.

Police said Mark Pellow, 18, an employee of Chicken On The Run, was robbed of about $140 in an incident at 1118 Bay about 11 p.m.

Police said Pellow's assailants made off in his delivery van. The van was discovered early today.

Pellow, a Grade 12 student at Oak Bay Senior Secondary said he was delivering an order for chicken for five people at the address when a woman called out and told him the order was hers.

He said he went in and was led to a back room where three men were sitting.

When they told him they had no money to pay for the chicken he said he decided to leave.

Two of the men and the woman chased him down the hallway to the outside where they caught him and threw him to the ground.

Pellow said one man got him in a choke hold around his neck while the other stood beside holding a frying pan in his hand.

"I told the guy I'd give him $10 if he'd let me go," Pellow said. "But he just tightened his grip and said to me 'That's what I'm here for . . . if you don't give me all the money I'm going to kill you'."

Pellow said he handed over his wallet and the man tried to drag him back into the apartment.

"I managed to punch him in the stomach. He let go and I took off," Pellow said.

He ran to a nearby apartment and phoned for help.

"I couldn't believe it happened to me," said Pellow.

But it wasn't enough to make him quit his part-time job.

"I'll continue," he said. "I need the money".

Timber Wolf Bugged

A timber wolf captured last week near Campbell River will be "bugged" before being freed.

And wildlife experts hope the bug will provide new data on the movements and habit of a timber wolf pack at the north end of Vancouver Island.

The male wolf, which appears to be about 18 months old, was captured after being shot with a tranquilizing dart. The animal will be fitted with a special collar equipped with a battery-powered direction finder.

Regional animal control officer Dan Lay, of Nanaimo, said it is hoped the wolf — which will be released near a pack on North Vancouver Island — will provide data on the pack's range of movement in relation to elk and other wildlife.

McKenzie To Crusade For Merger

Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie plans to use his newly-won seat on the Capital Region Board to launch a personal crusade against wasteful duplication of services and toward full amalgamation of the four core municipalities.

McKenzie, who gained one of the city's two vacant seats on the board by default in Saturday's civic election, said Tuesday: "I am going to do everything in my power to see this come about."

He has no illusions as to the difficulties involved, and admitted that "as far as the political aspect is concerned it would appear that I am the odd man out."

He said former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen had attempted about four years ago to arouse interst in the long-dormant amalgamation proposal, but Pollen seemed to be a lone voice at that time and apparently gave up the effort as hopeless.

McKenzie sees the regional board as the logical vehicle to carry the full load of amalgamated services and functions, upon the disbandment of the municipalities in their present form.

There would be a centralized bureaucracy in his scheme of things, and the regional board itself would have to be strengthened. "Perhaps" the municipal halls could remain as satellite offices of the main administrative structure.

He confidently predicted that such rationalization would save "millions of dollars."

McKenzie actually polled fewer votes Saturday than two other aspirants for the second regional board seat, but took precedence over them because municipalities' regional representatives must also be elected to, or currently serving on, their councils.

He denied a suggestion that his personal vote tally reflected any lack of enthusiasm for his strong stand on cost-cutting in all facets of the city's operations.

His election performance probably suffered because two newspapers "ignored the fact I was running," he speculated, and from critical comments directed at him recently by Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis.

Far from evidence of public opposition to his views, McKenzie said there were indications on a televison program earlier this week that many Victoria residents agree with him.

"I felt I had a tremendous response from the phone calls coming, showing how many people are in favor of my stand on economic policies."

'Lucky To Be Alive'

A fire department spokesman said today a 27-year-old man is lucky to be alive after being overcome by smoke in an apartment fire at 1731 Cook early today.

John McEwen was discovered unconscious in the hallway by the front door of his apartment and was dragged to safety by Assistant Chief Charlie Miller and fireman Bill Hennis.

"He's a lucky guy," said Miller. "If we'd been seconds later I doubt if we'd have been able to save him."

Fireman Tommy Black administered first aid at the scene and an ambulance took McEwen to Victoria General Hospital where he is reported in good condition.

Miller said the fire, reported at 4:11 a.m. by a tenant who smelled smoke, was confined to the suite McEwen was found in.

Miller estimated damage at about $2,000 and said that although the cause of the fire hasn't been determined he suspects careless smoking.

He said McEwen had apparently been trying to escape and got almost to the front door when he collapsed.

The fire was quickly extinguished after tenants in the block were evacuated.

Miller said a bed chesterfield was charred, some carpet and one wall burned and extensive smoke damage done to the apartment and hallway.

The Old Rolls Magic Still Works

Can Max go back to his Volks after his Rolls-Royce fling?

Oh, That Silence Is Awesome!

max low

When I stepped into the first car I ever owned — a 1936 Singer 9 — in the late 1950s, I never dreamed that one day I would drive a Rolls-Royce.

That old Singer, I remember, had bucket seats that always seemed to be in different places and it used to clang along the roads in New Zealand at a massive 50 miles an hour, its nine-horsepower engine almost bursting. And I was very proud of it.

The Rolls-Royce — a 1970 Silver Shadow — purrs along at almost any speed you desire, in a kind of awesome silence, with the only sound you hear coming from the tires as they gently rub the road.

It is, of course, not mine. After all, I'm not a politician or a plumber. But I did drive it. And it got me thinking about the magic in the name Rolls-Royce.

As I pulled gingerly out from the curb and inched nervously along Dallas Road, fearful of scratching the shiny beaut, I thought of when we were kids and used to spot cars and guess their makes as a pastime. We knew Rolls-Royce was "the best car in the world" as the old Rolls ad says. No kid would ever have argued with that.

There are some who might argue today in this era of high-performance cars, of Mercedes, of BMW and of Porsche. There are some who might say it's over-rated. But still the Rolls-Royce magic lives on.

Still today, as it has been for decades, Rolls-Royce is the only prestige car for many embassies and consulates around the world. And it's gaining new popularity among Hollywood and pop-music stars who want to show off their wealth in a refined sort of way.

At this stage I must say it isn't my kind of car. If I had a few thou, I wouldn't buy a Rolls. It just isn't my thing. I'd much rather have a TR3 or an MG. But then perhaps I enjoy being all cosy and cramped. If you don't, though, and you're tickled by the thought of all that space and the luxury of a polished wood and soft real leather interior, then I know where you can get your hands on a Rolls-Royce. Cheap, too!

But then everything is relative, isn't it? And at $26,995 the immaculate 1970 Silver Shadow that Plimley Motors on Yates Street is selling for a customer is "cheap." (The odometer reads 45,000.)

It seems less expensive when you compare it with a new Rolls-Royce. And when you discover that Rolls is by no means alone in the high-price car market; that you can pay $24,625 for the latest BMW, the three-litre CSI; that you can purchase the top Mercedes model, the 45SLC, for a basic $30,740 (if you want an electric sunroof, alloy wheels and a tape-recorder add another $1,500); and that you can fork out $40,000 for a hand-assembled Porsche Turbo Carrera.

Even at Plimleys, the glimmering Silver Shadow doesn't have everything to itself, for you can pay $22,325 for the new Jaguar XJS and around $32,000 for an Aston Martin.

From a humble beginning in 1904, when electrician-mechanic Henry Royce produced his first car, a tiny two-cylinder 10-horsepower model, Rolls-Royce (Henry teamed up with marketing expert Charles Rolls and the firm went into operation in 1906) became well-known in Britain as an armament firm and as a producer of civil and military jet aircraft engines, and famous around the world for its luxury cars.

That little 10-horsepower engine has grown over the years. The Silver Shadow I drove boasts a 6,750 cc engine, or roughly 325 h.p.

And it has grown in prestige and price.

A new Silver Shadow will cost anywhere from $40,000 to $50,000; the Corniche, a convertible popular in the United States, sells for $67,500 and Rolls' top-liner the elegant Camargue costs $74,000 and up! There are hosts of extras — you can still order one with a refrigerated cocktail cabinet in the back — and the company has just delivered a modified version of the Camargue to a potentate in the Middle East for around $100,000.

But, in case you're just dying to get your hands on one, you can't buy a Rolls-Royce on Vancouver Island, not a new one anyway. Nearest place for that is Clarke Simpkins Ltd. in Vancouver.

For many years, Plimleys stocked Rolls-Royce but gave the franchise up in the 1950s because they just weren't selling enough to warrant all that extra work.

"They are so meticulously built and the service was marvellous," Plimley general manager Norman Britnell told me. "If a customer had any trouble, the U.S. mechanical rep would be here in a flash from San Francisco.

"But the highest number we sold was about six in a year," he explained, "and that was back when a new Rolls was selling for just under $15,000 and you could buy a new Jag for $4,200!"

Often, the Rolls-Royce owners would pose more of a problem than the cars.

"Well, Rolls owners do tend to be on the meticulous side," Norman admitted with a grin. "And you spend a lot of time not only servicing the car but doing a lot of little things."

I can believe it. Meticulous, I should think would be somewhat of an understatement. I know I would become quite paranoid if I were to own and have to protect such a car.

Oh well, thanks for the drive, Mr. Britnell. Now, back to the real world of noise . . . and my rather-used Volkswagen.

Police Critic's Rap Uncalled for: Chief

Statements by a criminology consultant criticizing operational procedures and lack of training in the Victoria city police department are "totally unsubstantiated by the facts," Police Chief Jack Gregory said today.

"I think the comments were most uncalled for," said Gregory. "The man obviously didn't understand what was going on in the short time he was here."

He was referring to Neville Avison, criminology consultant to the federal justice department and former research director of the B.C. Police Commission, who at a Saanich police arbitration hearing last week compared city police methods unfavorably with those used in Saanich.

Avison claimed that Victoria's police cruisers are driven around "at random" as the police wait for something to happen, and that in the last two years at least 15 untrained officers had walked the streets with guns on their hips.

Gregory flatly denied that there is any random cruising.

"We have specific patrols and each car is assigned to specific duties," he said.

As for the allegation concerning armed but untrained officers, he said: "no one in this department has ever gone out armed unless he has been thoroughly trained and qualified in their use."

Gregory implied it was ironical that Avison should have compiled such a thorough dossier of city police inadequacies, after spending only a short time in the department in the specific role of conducting a survey on radio communications for the BCPC.

A similar rebuttal came from Victoria police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden, who said all members of the force are angry about Avison's remarks.

Braiden said he will go to Vancouver Friday to ask the police commission to dissociate itself from Avison's viewpoint.

Just Send Dollar, And Force a Smile

The United Way campaign committee decided Tuesday to make one last effort to hit its $800,000 target.

About $40,000 is needed.

The committee decided to try and "prick the consciences" of Victorians who promised to give money but never did during the six-week campaign that ended Oct. 22.

And on Sunday and Monday, the United Way will make a 48-hour "saturation appeal" to Greater Victorians to boost the donations over the target for the first time in a decade.

Campaign chairman Robert Siddall said the United Way is not reopening the campaign. Ninety radio spot announcements are planned for the 48-hour period.

"We are not trying to hammer the whole community till they are sick of us," Siddall said.

"The United Way represents the youth, handicapped, and aged of Greater Victoria — those who can't protect themselves.

"Our goal is almost within reach, This is a last-ditch effort. We are just asking that people send us a dollar and a smile," he added.

Greater Victoria ranks dead last among 16 largest communities in the nation when it comes to giving to the United Way.

The Windsor area, with a population smaller than Greater Victoria is raising $2.5 million this year — more than three times the Victoria drive.

Hostage Taker Gets Six Months

Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23, was sentenced in county court today to six months in jail for his part in a hostage-taking incident at Wilkinson Road jail last February.

He pleaded guilty earlier to unlawful confinement of prison guards Jim Waldron and John McDonald.

Twenty inmates barricaded themselves in the gymnasium at Wilkinson Road Feb. 19-20 and held the guards captive for 9½ hours to protest jail conditions.

Waldron and McDonald were not harmed.

Judge Leslie Cashman noted that Wilson has a criminal record and has spent much of the time since he was 15 in jail.

Although recognizing that no harm came to the guards, Cashman said "I have to bear in mind guards are as entitled to the protection of the law as our policemen."

HERITAGE TAG PINCHES

Only Sympathy from City

Victoria city council offered some sympathy but no real assurances of help Tuesday to the owners of the Hampton Court apartment building at 159 Cook Street, who complained that the proposed heritage designation of their property is a crippling financial burden.

Dr. J. J. Gow, representing owners E. and J. Murphy Ltd., told council's caucus meeting that if the designation went through his client would be left with an "unsaleable, arthritic" building on which income was restricted by rent controls but costs were constantly rising.

In addition, he said, the firm is faced with costs of at least $50,000 involved in bringing the building up to the fire marshal's requirements, and saddled with mortgages amounting to $170,000.

The mortgages were obtained on the basis that the property would retain its market value, but the heritage designation proposal has "depressed" that value to the point where the mortgages cannot be refinanced.

Operating loss on the building amounted to $1,000 a month, council was told.

Mayor Mike Young agreed that the 1913-vintage building is tied up in rent controls and lacks the tax write-off privileges of modern apartments.

He said in such cases "governmental strictures" are a greater cause of building destruction than termites or physical deterioration.

Young also conceded that if the fire marshal insisted on the whole building being brought up to 1976 safety standards, "it would be cheaper to get everyone out and light a match."

But he and other council members argued that the financial picture was not as bleak as had been painted. The building could not be worthless if it was covered by $170,000 in mortgages, they said.

Happy Hour Zapped

There's no more bubbly laughter at the University of Victoria's graduate students' happy hour these days . . . in fact no bubbly and not even a happy hour.

Graduate Students' Society president Al Rydant has cancelled the Friday night social function that was popular with faculty, staff, students and alumni.

Rydant's main complaint is the lack of support the grad society's executive gets from the membership at large — including not one taker for the vacant position of social director.

Funds slated for social functions will be diverted to other areas since there is no longer a social director, Rydant said.

YUM DUMPS CHAMP IN FIRST DEFENCE

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Yum Dong-Kyun of South Korea scored a first-round knockdown and went on to outpoint champion Royal Kobayashi of Japan Wednesday night, winning the World Boxing Council super bantamweight title.

The 15-round decision was a dramatic comeback for the 25-year-old Yum, who lost a controversial title match to Rigoberto Riasco of Panama in August.

It was Kobayashi's first defence since winning the title from the Panamanian by an eighth-round knockout in Tokyo last month.

Roy Is Welcome Back As Boxla Commissioner

Some mid-week musings, and it's good to have Roy Burton back as commissioner of the Western Lacrosse Association He did a good job last year, basically, and will be a better commissioner this time around because of that experience. And the fact that he has an assistant to keep an eye on things elsewhere will be of benefit too. Bruno Ohmann, a former convenor of the Ontario Lacrosse Association, will serve under Burton for the 1977 season. And just because some media reps agreed to disagree with a non-ruling by the commissioner last season is no reason to say he won't be welcome back in the media box at the start of next season. And speaking of watchdogs, whatever did happen to that plan where the media was going to be asked to keep an eye on violence in sport? Oh, well, it probably doesn't matter. I wouldn't trust them either. And what an unnecessary, and ridiculous fuss city council put up over that no-violence contract issue with the Cougars. Pat Ginnell indicated all along that hockey is capable of policing itself and, judging by results this season, it is Ginnell who is right. Ginnell and other coaches and managers in the league, that is. They are the ones to cool the players, or incite them, and the burden is theirs. And besides, wouldn't it be nice if city council said something nice about their tenants, like "hey, it's great to have a first-place club, isn't it?" And the Cougars are doing well.

Leon Hall is back from a trip to Eastern Canada and reports that former Maple Leaf manager, former Hockey Canada chief and former Toronto Toros manager Buck Houle doesn't ever want to hear the word "hockey" again. Buck is now engaged in private business and is doing nicely thank you. And for the person who asked, big Ernie Fox, who once played basketball here and was also the arena public address announcer, is still in Montreal, still eating his favorite peanut butter sandwiches and still teaching mathematics at the university level . . . And I like the statement attributed to coach John Majors of Pittsburgh when his club was voted the No. 1 college football team in the U.S., "The wind blows harder the higher you sit on the flagpole." . . . Racing driver Rodger Ward has come out in favor of a czar to steer the future of autosport. "The sport is not reaching its potential because there are too many people in control who are small and petty," he said in a recent article. "What is needed is a one-man rule over the entire sport, not just the United States Auto Club, but all phases of the sport. That's why NASCAR is so far ahead of the USAC; it isn't funny anymore." . . . Figure filberts and Montreal Canadiens' fans in particular have a new hero. He is Steve Shutt, who has 24 goals in 24 games, and if he can keep up that pace he will beat Phil Esposito's NHL record of 76 goals in an 80-game season. And maybe his linemates will have something to say about the possibility because they aren't bad, either, are Guy Lafleur and Jacques Lemaire.

And it's true, the fair sex are taking over. College recruiting of women athletes is increasing rapidly in the United States. Scholarship offers in several sports rather than the perfunctory handshake and the blue ribbon presentation are fast becoming the in-thing. And so are woman athletes. Just check your daily sports pages and the two unbeaten basketball teams of major import in our town are, you guessed it, the gals. Home Lumber is back on track in its bid for a second Canadian championship and the University of Victoria Vikettes under coach Mike Gallo is headed for a second unblemished regular season and another shot at the championship that barely eluded them last year . . . And hey, city council has become positive for a change and heeded the well-meant advice.

The achievements of the Victoria West Soccer Club, Bate fastball team, Victoria McDonald's lacrosse team and Victoria athletes who participated in the Olympic Games will be honored at a reception on Monday at the McPherson Playhouse. Champions all! And it is to be hoped that the non-inclusion of Home Lumber in the invitation particulars is an oversight because the headline of last March in the Times read: Home Are The Champs. Yes they were.

And it's difficult to recognize a curling team by the name of the skip this season. Bob Gallaugher has a new rink with Bud Taylor, Glen Ferrell and Wayne Statton up front while Barry Harvey, Bob's third of the past few years is now throwing last rocks for two other members of the former group, Ken Wark and Ken Lawter. Keith Dagg has come up with a potentially dangerous foursome of Gary Leibel, John Balloch and Al Beasley while Tim Horrigan, who earlier this year finished as runner-up in the Nelson mid-summer spiel, is right on top of his game with Don Edl at third, Peter Jonsson at second and Tom Machan at lead. And could be the rink to beat.

Driving For Two San Antonio's George Gervin (44) makes his move on the basket during National Basketball Association game against Buffalo Tuesday. Gervin scored 34 points as San Antonio won 122-115.

'Have No Weaknesses', Lancaster On Riders

REGINA (CP) — Quarterback Ron Lancaster, who will lead Saskatchewan Roughriders into the Grey Cup final Sunday against Ottawa Rough Riders in Toronto, said Tuesday this has been one of his most enjoyable seasons in the Canadian Football League.

Preparing for his final workout before boarding a plane today to Toronto, Lancaster said the season was more pleasant for him than in 1970 when the Roughriders won 14 games and lost only two.

"In 1970, I had that bad arm. This year I had no trouble at all. Everything was fine."

Lancaster, one of 11 Roughriders—four on offence and seven on defence—named to the Western Football Conference all-star team, was pleased that season-long doubts about the rushing game have been erased.

"At the start of the season, if we had one weakness it was our running game. We had lost George Reed and we knew every year that he would get 1,400 yards for us.

"When we were looking for the solid running, everybody knew we would have to pass but we still completed some passes and we won some games.

"I just don't think we have any weaknesses. The offensive and defensive lines are good and the receivers are good."

The Roughriders, as expected, did not work strenuously in their two days of practice here. They limbered up lightly and head coach John Payne said he was pleased with the improvement of the ankle injuries that kept slotback Tom Campana and cornerback Paul Williams out of the 23-13 victory over Edmonton Eskimos on Saturday in the sudden-death WFC final.

The victory put Saskatchewan into the national final for the first time since 1972 and Payne said Tuesday "there is a better than fair chance that Campana and Williams will play."

Lancaster said the improvement of the running game will give Regina an additional weapon against Ottawa and praised Mike Dirks, a former defensive specialist who played in the offensive line for the first time, as a key in the offence's success.

He said Dirks should have made the all-star team because he played well in various positions.

"Mike took on all the big guys on all the other teams and beat most of them. I know in one game he got a 50-50 split with Bill Baker (British Columbia Lions defensive end) and that's about as well as anybody can do."

Cloutier Hot

By The Canadian Press

Real Cloutier probably never will score as many goals in a World Hockey Association season as he did in his final junior year, but the 20-year-old native of St. Emile, Que., is going to give it a try.

Cloutier scored 93 goals and 123 assists in the 1973-74 season, his last with Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League.

He was drafted by Quebec Nordiques in May, 1974, and scored 26 goals and 27 assists in his rookie season. Last year, the versatile Cloutier, who can play either right or left wing, scored 60 goals and 54 assists for 114 points.

This season, Cloutier has shown no signs of letting up in the goal-producing department. On Tuesday night, he scored three goals and asssisted on two others to lead the Nordiques to a 7-4 victory over Winnipeg Jets.

The five-foot-10, 170-pound Cloutier has a league-high 23 goals along with 21 assists to lead the league in scoring with 44 points.

In other games Tuesday night, Birmingham Bulls downed Calgary Cowboys 3-1, Minnesota Fighting Saints shut out Cincinnati Stingers 4-0, Houston Aeros defeated Edmonton Oilers 5-3 and Indianapolis Racers edged New England Whalers 4-3.

FERGY FIVE BACK WITH HOT FINISH

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

PHOENIX — Cec Ferguson of Victoria recovering strongly on the last nine holes, scored a three-under-par 68 Tuesday to stand five shots behind the leader in the National Golfers' of America fourth and final tournament of the Arizona series.

Ferguson, 38-30 — 68 and tied for 11th place after the first round, was trailing Dan Currillo, who scored an eight-under 63 on the Pima Course. J.R. Shade was alone in the runner-up berth with a 65. There were four players at 66 and another four at 67.

Three over par on the first three holes, Ferguson caught fire on the back nine notching four birdies and an eagle.

At the Camel Back course, a team headed by Cowichan professional Bill Wakeham held the lead in the annual Canadian Professional Golfers' Association pro-amateur classic.

Wakeham, Don Hunt, Bill Bond and J. Urton had a two-round total of 328 points, two in front of the foursome headed by Ray Milne of Edmonton Highlands. The team of Vancouver pro Al Nelson was third at 322.

Other scores of teams guided by Vancouver Island professionals included Mike Rivers of Nanaimo, 316; former Colwood assistant Ted Genest, 308; Bill Goldsworthy of Cedar Hill, 285, and Victoria driving range pro Laurie Carroll, 279.

Wakeham, 71-71—142, two under par, trailed Frank Fowler of Fairmont Hot Springs, 65-69—134, by eight shots in the race for individual pro honors. Alvie Thompson of Vancouver was also at 142.

Shutout, Assist For Bannerman

Murray Bannerman made the big save early and served up some late entertainment as he stole the show Tuesday night at Memorial Arena.

The dedicated young man who has become one of the most poised and proficient goaltenders in the Western Canada Hockey League was a spectacular performer as he anchored Victoria Cougars to a 6-0 triumph over Calgary Centennials.

Playing before 1,925 spectators, Bannerman was credited with 34 saves as the Cats fired two goals in each period and boosted their first-place margin in the Western Division to four points over New Westminster Bruins.

Bannerman, who required several super saves to record the shutout, perhaps took a lot of enthusiasm out of the Centennials with a brilliant move while the clubs were locked in a scoreless deadlock midway in the opening period.

It came when Doug Lecuyer burst through the Victoria defence and fired a low sizzler. Murray zipped a skate to deflect the puck wide of the goal and he was on his way to his second shutout of the season and third of his WCHL career.

That effort appeared to do wonders for the Cats. They picked up stream and surged into a 2-0 first-period lead on goals less than two minutes apart by Gary Lupul and Archie Henderson.

Two Cougar rookies also produced quick scoring burst in the second period. Bob Jansch and Alvin Szott notched tallies in a span of 90 seconds to make it 4-0

Defenceman Lorry Gloeckner, apparently untroubled by a back injury suffered in a pre-game warmup Saturday, added to the Victoria total in the third period and Curt Fraser completed the scoring with 72 seconds remaining on the clock.

It was on Gloeckner's tally that Bannerman produced a play much appreciated by the fans.

Murray alertly cleared the puck from inside the Victoria blueline to mid-ice, where it was gathered in by Gloeckner, who had just finished serving a penalty.

Gloeckner wheeled into Calgary territory, split the defence and collected his second goal of the season with a high shot.

"It's something we practice every day," Bannerman said later of the scoring play. "It's really a very simply play, but when it works it looks great."

Centennials, Central Division co-leaders, were outshot by the slender margin of 36-34 as they lost their third successive decision on a Western Division trip, in which they have been outscored by 17 goals.

Additional trouble for the Calgary club arrived in the second period Tuesday when defenceman Craig Topolinsky was hit hard by Victoria rookie Kevin Clackson. Topolinsky was assisted from the playing surface and did not return to action.

In other games Tuesday, Winnipeg Monarchs scored twice in the final period to trip Flin Flon Bombers 4-2 and Kamloops Chiefs ended a six-game losing streak by bouncing Saskatoon Blades 7-5.

Habs End Islander Streak

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Yvon Cournoyer and Steve Shutt scored first-period goals within a span of 64 seconds to help Montreal Canadiens to a 5-1 National Hockey League victory Tuesday and end a 10-game New York Islanders unbeaten streak.

Victory gave the defending Stanley Cup champions a record of 17-4-3 and a league high point total of 37.

The loss was the first for the Islanders at home this season and was their first setback after a streak that included eight victories.

Montreal took advantage of New York's inability to clear out of its own end for the opening-period goals.

Cournoyer stole the puck from Denis Potvin and connected from 20 feet at 10:07 and Shutt, the NHL's leading goal scorer with 24 in 24 games, took the puck from Jude Drouin, passed to Guy Lafleur and took a return pass to score from 12 feet out on the glove side of goaltender Glenn Resch.

Bobby Nystrom faked Montreal goalie Ken Dryden 39 seconds before the end of the opening period for New York's only goal.

Lafleur made it 3-1 at 41 seconds of the second period from 15 feet. Jacques Lemaire and Rejean Houle had Montreal's other goals.

JACKSON CLEARED

'Only Pot, Not Even an Ounce'

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Crown prosecutors have decided not to lay charges against outfielder Reggie Jackson after a small amount of marijuana was found in his luggage at Mirabel International Airport last Friday.

The newspaper says Jackson apparently did not know that he may have done anything illegal and was permitted to leave Montreal late Sunday after two days of contract talks with the National League's Montreal Expos.

The Expos, who made Jackson their first choice in the free-agent draft Nov. 4, are competing with San Diego Padres and New York Yankess to sign him.

Expos president John McHale is quoted as saying he discussed the incident with Jackson and was convinced he was not a habitual user of drugs.

The federal Crown prosecutor who handled the case is reported as having told the newspaper that no charges were laid "because it was only pot, not even an ounce." He said the decision was based on "the probability of acquittal."

"Simple possession of up to two ounces of marijuana is legal in California," where Jackson resides, he said. "There was no question of laying a charge of illegal importation."

The prosecutor said an RCMP investigation "showed that (Jackson) did not have control over his luggage for at least 12 hours."

"His suitcase, which contained marijuana, was locked but the keys were tied to the handle."

The RCMP confirmed it had prepared a report on the incident.

Herron Nabbed On Drug Charge

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Canadian Football League running back Mack Herron, who set a National Football League combined yardage record two years ago, was arrested Tuesday on charges of cocaine possession.

Herron, 28, was questioned by two policemen who said they noticed him standing in a building doorway. They said they noted something in his mouth and found it to be a plastic bag containing one-half ounce of cocaine, worth about $400.

Herron reached the peak of his career two years ago with New England Patriots. In combined yardage, he netted an NFL record 1,839 yards on 150 attempts—a 12.26-yard average.

Prior to his staint with the Patriots, Herron spent two seasons with Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the CFL.

His CFL career ended in May, 1972, when he was arrested and charged with possession of marijuana and cocaine. He pleaded guilty to the charges and was given a suspended sentence and fined $1,000.

He was dropped by Los Angeles Rams of the NFL earlier this season.

MORGAN EASY WINNER OF NL 'MVP' HONOR

NEW YORK (AP) — Second baseman Joe Morgan of Cincinnati Reds today became only the second man in National League baseball history to win most valuable player honors two consecutive seasons.

Ernie Banks, former Chicago Cubs shortstop, was named MVP in 1958 and 1959.

In the American League, consecutive winners included Jimmy Foxx, Hal Newhouser, Yogi Berra, Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris.

Morgan, who won convincingly over Greg Luzinski in 1975, was an equally impressive winner over his Cincinnati team-mate George Foster this year in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. The five-foot-seven, 165-pound infielder collected 19 first-place votes from the 24-man committee. The other five voters placed him second.

Morgan finished fifth in the batting race with a .320 average. He had 111 runs batted in, 10 less than Foster, the league leader. Morgan also hit 27 home runs and stole 60 bases despite an injury-plagued season.

"It's a real honor, I think of it as being unique," Morgan said when informed of his award. "Ernie Banks was the only other guy to win it two years in a row, but he did it on a team that finished in ninth and 10th place. Nowadays, if a team finished last you wouldn't win the MVP.

"Ernie was one of a kind and I think maybe this award is the same thing."

JOE MORGAN
. . . second year in row

What first-place votes Morgan did not get went to Foster, who finished second. Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt was third. The three were the only players named on all 24 ballots.

Morgan finished with a total of 311 points. Foster garnered 221 and Schmidt 179.

The Reds placed three players in the top four, as third baseman Pete Rose finished fourth with 131 points. Cincinnati's Ken Griffey was tied for eighth. Philadelphia had three players in the first 10, with Garry Maddox fifth and Greg Luzinski tied for eighth.

Edwards, Green Top East Poll

TORONTO (CP) — Jimmy Edwards, a man previously known only as a nomadic wanderer in football, Tuesday was named one of two unanimous selections among the Eastern Football Conference all-stars.

Edwards, who finally settled down this season with Hamilton Tiger-Cats after brief appearances with 11 other clubs since high school, and Ottawa's Art Green were unanimous choices for running back.

Andy Hopkins, who moved to Montreal in the trade that sent Edwards to Hamilton, was the other running back in the EFC all-star lineup chosen in balloting by the Football Reporters of Canada.

Near-unanimous choices were quarterback Tom Clements and centre Donn Smith of Ottawa Rough Riders, defensive end Junior Ah You of Montreal Alouettes and defensive tackle Granville Liggins of Toronto Argonauts.

The complete all-star lineup:

Montreal led with nine selections, Ottawa had seven, Hamilton five and Toronto four.

Edwards, a 23-year-old, 5-foot-9, 185-pound speedster, joined Hamilton in a trade just before the Ticats' final pre-season game.

Before that, his football career had included stops at University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma Central, Southwest Oklahoma, Northeast Louisiana State, British Columbia Lions, Birmingham of the defunct World Football League, New England Patriots of the National Football League, Toronto Argonauts, Shreveport of the WFL and Montreal.

Finally settling down with the Ticats this season, he led the club with gains of 1046 yards rushing, 457 yards on pass receptions, 690 yards on punt returns and 372 yards on kickoff returns.

He also led the club with 12 touchdowns and became the EFC nominee for the Canadian Football League's outstanding player of the year.

Green, who along with Yochum, Ah You and Harris, is appearing on the all-star team for the third successive year, led the East in rushing with 1257 yards on 234 carries.

Hopkins was second in EFC rushing with 1075 yards and Edwards third.

Players making their second consecutive appearance on the all-Eastern squad are Clements, Braggins, Liggins, Weir, Utek, and Rodgers. Cameron also earned his second all-star rating but last year he was picked as an outside linebacker on the Western Conference team after his rookie season with British Columbia Lions.

Rodgers this year was picked as a wide receiver after appearing last year as an all-star running back.

OFFENCE

Quarterback — Tom Clements, Ottawa.
Running backs — Jimmy Edwards, Hamilton; Art Green, Ottawa; Andy Hopkins, Montreal.
Wide Receivers — Johnny Rodgers, Montreal; Mike Eben, Toronto.
Tight end — Tony Gabriel, Ottawa.
Centre — Donn Smith, Ottawa.
Guards — Dave Braggins, Montreal; Larry Butler, Hamilton.
Tackles — Dan Yochum, Montreal; Jim Coode, Ottawa.

DEFENCE

Ends — Junior Ah You, Montreal; Mike Samples, Hamilton.
Tackles — Granny Liggins, Toronto; Glen Weir, Montreal.
Middle linebacker — Larry Cameron, Ottawa.
Outside linebackers — Chuck Zapiec, Montreal; Mark Koosmos, Ottawa.
Backs — Dickie Harris and Phil Price, Montreal; Steve Dennis and Larry Uteck, Toronto; Dave Shaw and Lewis Porter, Hamilton.
Shaw, Uteck and Porter were tied with the same number of votes, resulting in six backs being selected.

Peters, Kennedy Shine for Legion

Dave Peters and Kevin Kennedy grabbed the spotlight Tuesday night at George Pearkes Arena and lifted Esquimalt Legion into a first-place tie with Saanich Braves in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Playing before about 600 spectators, Peters turned aside 42 shots at the Esquimalt goal and Kennedy continued a hot scoring streak by collecting four tallies as the Legion tripped the Braves by an 8-5 count.

Peters was at his best in the final period, when the Braves had a 19-6 edge in shots on goal.

Jerry Lindal, John Entzminger, Murray Allen and Rick McLeod also scored for Esquimalt.

Saanich tallies were produced by Tom King (2), Rob Coldwell (2) and Wayne Larsen.

Scott Scuttles Winless Interiors

James Bay and Stevens Interiors staged a barn-burner of a finish Tuesday night in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League battle at Lambrick Junior High School

In the end it was the Interiors who got scorched, dropping a 76-74 decision when Ian Scott connected for the Bays with 10 seconds remaining.

It was an unfortunate finish for the Stevens crew, still looking for a first triumph of the season.

Trailing by four points at halftime, Interiors had pulled even at 74-74 with 27 seconds remaining on a basket by Bryan Grant and then saw their victory hopes scuttled by Scott.

Grant paced the losers with 19 points and clubmate Jim Cunningham accounted for 18.

Scott notched 12 points for the Bays, who were sparked on attack by John Campbell (19), and Ian Suherland-Brown (16).

JAMES BAY (76): John Campbell 19, Brian Sutherland-Brown 16, Ian Scott 12, Mike Morrill 12, Clive Haas 6, Dave Anderson 3, Al Martyn 3, Jim Merz 3, Clare Anderson 2.

Dinah's Tourney Richest Ever For the Ladies

NEW YORK (AP) — The Sixth annual Dinah Shore Winners Circle golf championship will offer $305,000 in prizes, making it the richest event in women's sports.

First prize has been increased to $36,000, the highest in women's golf history.

The final two days of the tournament, which will be held March 29 through April 3 at the Mission Hills Country Club in Palm Springs, Calif., will be televised nationally by ABC.

The tourney was inaugurated in 1972 with a purse of $110,000.

Athletics by Six In Big Six Loop

Victoria Athletics are threatening to run away from their rivals in the South Island Big Six Hockey League.

Losers only twice in 15 outings this season, the Athletics stretched their first-place margin to six points Tuesday night by drubbing Victoria Maple Leafs 12-2 at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Athletics, who have yielded goals at an average of 3.53 per game, got a 24-save performance from goalie Reg Wonnonberg as they fired 48 shots at Victoria netminders Larry Hall and Ken Olson.

Bryan Hamilton scored three times and Graham Brown, Don Thompson and Dave Williams each counted twice for the Athletics.

Murray Kennett notched both Maple Leaf tallies.

New Name Works

New Power appears to have arrived with a new name for Nanaimo's high school boys' basketball squad.

Formerly the Hubsters, Nanaimo Islanders are making life miserable this season for clubs from the Victoria area.

Islanders, who had jolted the talented Oak Bay Bays 76-71 last weekend, rambled to a fourth straight victory Tuesday night at Belmont High School by crushing Dunsmuir Demons 113-64 in an exhibition contest.

Mike Montgomery (33 points) and Gerald Kozanowski (25) paced the Nanaimo attack.

Rick Jeffrey did his best for Dunsmuir, hitting for 27 points.

Cowichan Thunderbirds are following the Nanaimo pattern in providing trouble for the Victoria teams.

Thunderbirds were at it again on their home floor Tuesday. This time they blasted Spectrum 90-43 to make it five wins in five starts.

Ken Larson, Dan Beaumont, Pat Smith and Ed Olthof each counted 14 points for the Birds and Grant Clark notched 17 for Spectrum.

Ramirez Winner

HOUSTON (AP) — Raul Ramirez of Mexico has become the fifth player to win the Grand Prix of tennis since its inception in 1970. Ramirez has clinched both top prizes, $150,000 in singles and $40,000 in doubles.

The top eight singles players and the top four doubles teams in the final Grand Prix standings are to compete in the Masters Tournament here Dec. 5-12.

Ramirez had 878 points in singles and 269 points in doubles going into this week's South African Open, the final tournament of the 22-country 1976 tour.

The top 35 men in singles and top 20 in doubles will earn shares in the $1 million Grand Prix bonus pool.

Manuel Orantes of Spain currently is in the No. 2 spot in singles with 811 points and is followed by Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., at 800.

Following Ramirez in doubles are his regular partner, Brian Gottfried, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., at 223, Fred McNair, Chevy Chase, Md., 186, and Sherwood Stewart, Baytown, Tex., 170.

Previous winners of the top Grand Prix money have been Cliff Richey, Stan Smith, Ilie Nastase and Guillermo Vilas.

Orantes and his partner Juan Gisbert, tied for No. 1 in doubles last year, the first time doubles competition participated in the standings and bonus pool.

Gallaugher Shares Lead

Bob Gallaugher's rink moved into a first-place tie with Tim Horrigan's foursome in Super-League curling action at the Racquet Club Tuesday night.

Gallaugher defeated Len Becker, 6-5, in an extra end while Horrigan lost to Bob Hawkes 8-6. In other games Steve Skillings defeated Gord Paterson 7-6, in an extra end and Keith Dagg downed Ted Jurista 9-4.

Gallaugher and Horrigan each have five wins while Hawkes and Skillings are one back.

GRAY KEEPS TITLE WITH KNOCKOUT WIN

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight boxing champion Clyde Gray scored a fifth round technical knockout over Nigerian welterweight boxing champion Kevin Odus Tuesday night to successfully defend his Commonwealth title for the fifth time.

The win came at 1:40 of the fifth round of a scheduled 15-round fight.

Gray knocked Odus down twice for eight counts in the second round when he began slamming him with sharp left hooks. The end came when Gray scored to the head with a series of left and rights. Odus went to the mat and was up at the nine count but the fight was stopped.

Island Clubs Travel

Action starts Thursday at Nelson in the Provincial high school girls' volleyball championship tournament with Spectrum, Victoria High and G. P. Vanier of Courtenay representing Vancouver Island.

Vic High is the defending B.C. champion, Spectrum is the current Greater Victoria champion and G. P. Vanier holds the Island crown.

The tournament is an 18-team, three-day event in which clubs will compete in round-robin play in three divisions Thursday. The top three clubs in each division will advance into championship playoffs.

Birds Down Aussies

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia Thunderbirds had little trouble defeating the Australian Universities basketball team 84-60 Tuesday night before 500 fans. It was the Australian's first stop in a North American tour. The Thunderbirds led 41-25 at the half.

Yarborough's Title 20 Years in Making

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — After nearly two decades in the top echelon of stock car drivers, Cale Yarborough has finally won the championship in the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing.

Yarborough collected $307,591 in prize money during the year and will realize an estimated $100,000 more as champion.

He edged six-time winner Richard Petty in a battle that went down to the last of the 30 races in 1976.

When Yarborough took the green starting flag in the 500 at Ontario, Calif., Sunday, he was assured of the championship.

Yarborough finished the season with 4,644 points and Petty had 4,449. Petty won slightly more prize money, $308,074.

Competing on the NASCAR trail for 19 years, Yarborough drove only the super speedways for a long time and could not compile enough points for the title. In recent years, he became the driver for the Junior Johnson Chevrolet team and entered more races. He finished second in the point race in 1973 and 1974.

Pearson was third in money winning with $275,699. Then came Benny Parsons at $216,459, followed by Buddy Baker at $202,094.

New Year's Day Bowls Bid For All-Time Clunker List

By PAUL ATTNER
Washington Post

ST. LOUIS — Football widows everywhere should rejoice. Thanks to those wonderful people who run the New Year's Day bowls, you might get your husbands back from the clutches of television earlier than usual this season.

It probably will take the most fanatic of football fans to watch the entire upcoming major bowl schedule. There may have been other times when the lineup was more unattractive, but this year's is a strong candidate for the all-time clunker list.

The only salvation could come if Penn State manages to upset No. 1 Pittsburgh on Friday. Then th Rose Bowl would match Michigan and Southern California in a showdown for the national title, which makes for a most exciting game.

If Pitt wins, however, this is what fans can look forward to:

—An Orange Bowl game featuring either Colorado or Nebraska, neither of which has superstars or highly regarded teams, against Ohio State, which has an 8-2-1 record only because it plays in the dreadfully weak Big 10. The Buckeyes aren't a major bowl team, but got a bid anyway because they will bring a horde of fans with them to Miami.

—A Cotton Bowl matchup between Maryland and Houston, which has even officials of that bowl worried. Both schools have poor reputations for selling tickets among their own fans, so there is a strong possibility the game won't be a sellout. Cotton publicity will focus on Maryland's undefeated record and high ranking, but the Terrapins have little national identity (a leadaing trivia question in the Big 10 asks you to name one Maryland player). And Houston isn't going to attract many television viewers outside the Southwest.

—A Sugar Bowl game which is saved only by the presence of Tony Dorsett. Georgia may be a better team than most experts believe, but try to convince a skeptical public of that before Jan. 1. This game, however, at least will attract the curious fan interested in seeing if Dorsett is as good as advertised. But if Pitt loses to Penn State, even Dorsett may not be enough to hype the TV ratings.

That leaves the Rose Bowl. And that should be a beauty, even if it isn't for the national title. Michigan and USC could combine to make a quality expansion franchise in the NFL. They also have enough quickness to keep things lively on offense and keep viewers awake for both halves.

The minor bowls have fared much better than the majors. Notre Dame and Penn State in the Gator Bowl and Alabama against UCLA in the Liberty are attractive matchups while Florida and Texas A and M in the Sun could be a high-scoring, entertaining affair.

There already is talk that the NCAA will look into possible violations of new rules covering bowl bids. Maryland already was committed to the Cotton and Pitt to the Sugar long before the 6 p.m. Saturday deadline, which supposedly was the first time schools and bowls could taldk officially with each other.

Harris to Coach Italian Teams

TORONTO (CP) — Billy Harris, former coach of Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association, has agreed to handle Italy's senior and junior teams and direct its entire hockey program. He leaves for Milan next week to begin work under a one-year contract.

Central Saanich Centre A Dead Issue: Alderman

The question of Central Saanich funding for a recreation centre is a dead issue, Ald. David Hill said Tuesday.

He was commenting on a statement by Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm who said he hoped Central Saanich would have a change of heart so a curling rink could be added to the planned swimming pool and hockey rink.

Sidney and North Saanich will pay the costs of the $1.3 million structure, scaled down from $1.8 million.

"The people of Central Saanich have made their wishes known by defeating the referendum," Hill said.

"The issue has been settled."

Hill said he was keenly disappointed by the decision of the voters because he favored the project. However, he now has dropped all attempts to stress recreational facilities because residents obviously have other priorities, especially improved water supplies and a new hospital. In addition, the police and fire hall will soon have to be replaced with a new structure.

Hill said he opposed the recreation centre plan when the price tag was $3.8 million but he backed a cut-back version.

'TAJ MAHAL' TENDER

Saanich is considering using its own men to build change rooms at Braefoot Park after receiving what Ald. Sandy Noel charged was a "Taj Mahal" tender for the work.

The lowest tender considered by the parks and recreation committee on Tuesday was from Perma Construction for $57,975.

In a memo, municipal engineer Cliff Warren reported that only $40,000 had been budgeted.

Chairman Ald. Fred Severson noted it was to build four change rooms with a central shower.

"What are we building, a Taj Mahal?" Noel asked. "It's a very plain structure. There's nothing fancy about it at all."

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne will get estimates of what it will cost to have Saanich workers do the job and report to the Dec. 6 council meeting.

Ex-Astronaut Chairman

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)— Eastern Air Lines president Frank Borman was elected chairman of the board of directors Tuesday, following the resignation of Floyd Hall. Borman, a former astronaut, will retain his existing titles of president and chief executive officer, an Eastern spokesman said.

Team Gets Park on Probation

The Agrarian Rugby Club will have to serve a year of probation before Saanich council decides whether to allow it to use Layritz Park as a permanent home field.

Recreation administrator Bill Young told the parks and recreation committee on Tuesday, "It's a new club to us. Before any long-term agreement I would like to know them a little better."

The committee agreed and will review the situation at the end of the season.

The club also wants changes in the field house, the use of Copley Park for practice two evenings a week and wants to build a small clubhouse in the park.

Parks administrator Frank Andrews said his department would not approve additional use of Copley Park for practice sessions.

"The fields are already showing signs of excessive wear at this early stage of the season," he reported.

Ald. David Paterson was leery about having a clubhouse that would be used for socializing after practices and games.

"This type of clubhouse could become hallowed ground. I don't know that I'm in favor of that," he said.

The club has been playing in Sidney.

In other business, Young informed aldermen he will ask for $50,000 in the 1977 budget for improvements at the G. R. Pearkes Arena.

Plans call for enclosure of the lobby on the main floor and addition of a second floor. This would create a warm area for spectators, Young said, and the upper floor could provide a revenue-making area, accommodating between 180 and 200.

"We have one of the few arenas in B.C. where people can't at least sit and watch in a warm area," Ald. Fred Severson said, agreeing the project would be worthwhile.

Peanuts Boosted By Carter Fans

WASHINGTON (WP) — "She was wearing a gilt peanut between her breasts," says a guest the morning after a dinner party in North Carolina. "I thought it was rather sexy."

On New York's Upper West Side, a young man munches hot, fresh topical, peanut doughnuts. "I always ask for the Jimmy Carter special," he says. "They know what I mean."

A number of businessmen know. In the wake of Jimmy Carter's victory — a time for political groupies, office-seekers, and collectors of kitsch to scramble for mementos before the red dust of Georgia settles — entrepreneurs and retailers are cashing in. The once-paltry peanut ("peanut gallery," "work for peanuts") is newly exalted, supremely egalitarian, and, some think chic.

"They're just about as hot as an item can get," says T. H. Thompson, a representative of Peanuts from Plains, Inc., a newly formed company which markets mail-order peanut seeds in plastic pots. Everyone knows how desirable house plants are, and now, enter the peanut plant, which, says Thompson proudly, "has glossy green leaves and pink blassoms — real pretty."

"There are a lot of misconceptions about the peanut plant," Thompson adds. "We get letters from people who think they grow on trees."

By preparing Christmas boxes for "the major retail chains," the Peanuts from Plains, Inc. people (several Plains peanut growers and a grocery store owner) hope to clear up such matters. "I think that for at least four years most everybody coming down I-75 on their way to Florida will stop here," he says.

Just in case, Peanuts from Plains, Inc. is opening a souvenir shop in a renovated gas station (similar to the one Billy Carter owns). It will sell sugar cane, grits, peanut meal, boiled peanuts or peanuts cooked in oil. For true regional flavor, there will be women "making homemade peanut brittle." Elsewhere in Plains, peanut soil is being offered for $5 a bottle, and square inches of a peanut field for $5 an inch.

George Washington Carver may have manufactured 300 things from peanuts — mayonnaise, cheese, chile sauce, linoleum, shampoo and mock chicken among them — but others have managed in recent months to create more variations on the Arachis hypogaea (peanut) theme than even Carter could imagine.

"I'm a firm believer in merchandising your candidate," says Toni Peabody of the Democratic General Store in Washington's Georgetown area, "and you have to do it with junk."

The General Store, which started during the campaign, is still selling peanuts, at least until Saturday (though they hope to reopen with Inaugural items soon) as well as peanut-inspired scarves (like the one designed by Frankie Welch which Rosalynn was wearing on TV one night, to the delight of General Store valunteers), ties, T-shires, hats, needlepoint bags (like the one Joan Mondale was holding the same evening), posters, bumper stickers and buttons. Sorry, the $5 genuine brown paper Carter warehouse peanut bags were sold out long ago.

"The peanut," says a Bailey, Banks and Biddle ad, "as everybody in Georgia knows or ought to know, is Southern Gold."

At Bailey, Banks and Biddle, jewellers in McLean, Va., they've sold three $125 peanut pendants; in Bethesda, Md. "at least six in Columbia, Md., four - "five, but one was returned, maybe it was bought for a Ford supporter" — and in Landover, Md., a whopping "three dozen, approximately." As might be expected, less expensive versions in sterling have sold even better.

Some members of the Old Guard are holding the line in this peanut buiseness. Tiffany's hasn't bothered to order anything new. "My dear, we were into peanuts before Mr. Carter," said a spokeswoman grandly. "We've had imported peanut pillboxes since, oh, 1959. But at the moment we're out of them."

Surveying Cold, Lonely

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — It's lonely, sometimes scary, and often cold being a Canadian Forces surveyor in the North.

Each day a surveyor stands on a wind-swept hill peering through his theodolite and reading his tellerometer, checking angles and distances with another surveyor on a hill eight miles away.

Ten Canadian Forces members and four civilians are working on Baffin Island, gathering information for maps on a scale of one inch to one mile. Arctic maps of the area now have a scale of an inch to eight miles.

The surveyors, working in teams of three, are brought daily by helicopter to hills about eight miles apart. There they set up their theodolites, which measure the angles between each station, and their tellerometers, which measure distances electronically.

Using this equipment, a wet-and-dry-bulb thermometer and a barometer to measure height differences, the surveyors can achieve an accuracy within five inches.

With the completion of the summer operation the surveyors will have covered 170 survey stations and 2,000 line-miles of traverse.

Weather is the enemy of the surveyors because many of their measurements are based on line-of-sight operation, and they cannot work in fog.

The fog, rolling in from Hudson Strait, can sometimes delay their removal from their worksites at the end of the day, because even with radio equipment to direct the pilots to their sites it may be difficult to find them in the fog.

In case it becomes necessary to spend the night, each surveyor goes equipped with an emergency pack and a rifle. Wandering polar bears may present a hazard and the weather can be trying on the nerves.

Sgt. Bruce Sinclair, 34, of Metcalfe, Ont., described the weather this year as "11 months of winter and one month bad sledding."

Long before the snow was off the ground last spring, elaborate preparations were made to see that the survey teams had adequate supplies of fuel and other necessities.

Military mapping began in Canada in the early 19th century when units of the Royal Engineers produced a series of large-scale topographical maps of areas around garrison towns.

Even Abandoning N-Fuel Plants Entails Staggering Expenses

COAL POWER CHEAPER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Atomic reactors must shut down so often for maintenance or repairs that coal-generated electricity is up to 20 per cent cheaper than nuclear power in most parts of the U.S. a public interest group said Tuesday.

The private, non-profit Council on Economic Priorities said atomic power plants can compete economically with coal only in the northeast.

In a report billed as the first comprehensive comparison of reliability and cost between coal and nuclear power, the council said atomic plants have proven so uneconomical that more attention should be given to energy alternatives previously downgraded as too expensive.

The 214-page report, titled "power plant performance," said nuclear plants under 800 megawatts operated at only an average 64 per cent capacity from 1968 through 1975. Plants over 1,000 megawatts, it said, averaged 51 per cent.

By contrast, it said, coal-fired plants operate at 60 to 70 per cent and therefore, can produce electricity up to 20 percent more economically.

Claims that nuclear power is cheaper than coal-generated electricity are based on assumptions the plants will operate with 70 to 80 per cent capacity, the report said.

WASHINGTON (WP) — An independent contractor has told the federal government it will cost the United States a staggering $540 million to abandon an obsolete atomic fuel reprocessing factory near Buffalo, N.Y.

The factory is operated by a subsidiary of Getty Oil Corp., Nuclear Fuel Services Corp., on land owned by the state of New York, neither of which plan to extend their contract when it expires in 1980. The factory has not reprocessed any spent atomic fuel in more than four years and will probably have to be closed down and abandoned when the contract with Nuclear Fuel Services and the state expires.

When that happens, the Battelle Pacific Northwest Laboratory has told the Energy Research and Development Administration, the toxic liquid atomic wastes kept in storage tanks at the factory will have to be solidified into a cement or glass form and shipped to a permanent repository of atomic wastes.

Batelle has said that this means a factory to solidify the liquid wastes will have to be built alongside the fuel reprocessing plant, which is located at West Valley, N.Y. The cost of building this facility, operating it and shipping the solid wastes is estimated at $540 million.

This figure raises the question of how much it might cost to build nucelar fuel reprocessing plants elsewhere in the United States. One estimate is that at least 10 of these plants will be needed to handle the wastes pouring out of U.S. atomic power plants in 10 to 20 years from now.

All of these plants will need facilities to convert liquid wastes to solids, which will then have to be carted to permanent repositories. A reprocessing plant at Barnwell, S.C., has already cost $250 million, without any allowance for converting liquids to solids.

A double-walled storage tank at the West Valley plant contains 600,000 gallons of what nuclear fuels experts call "high level" radioactive wastes.

So hot are these wastes that their temperature has stayed steady at 195 degrees since they were placed in the storage tank 10 years ago.

Miners Boycott Shaft After Bomb Discovered

MORGANFIELD Ky. (AP) — Almost 500 miners have refused to enter a Peabody Coal Co. mine near here since last Friday when a homemade bomb was found deep inside the shaft, a union official said Tuesday.

Bobby Nofsinger, president of the United Mine Workers union said the men probably won't work until someone is arrested.

He said more than 200 men were in the mine when the bomb was found. Had it not been located and deactivated, "I think probably 100 people would have been killed right away and it's a possibility that 100 others couldn't have gotten out."

The bomb was found by a foreman on a routine pre-shift inspection about 2½ miles inside the shaft and several hundred feet underground.

Union County Sheriff James Hedges said a stick of dynamite was wired so that it would explode had a saw used to cut timber been turned on.

Those in the mine were evacuated immediately, company officials said.

Nofsinger said the bomb was near other explosive material and "when the timberman turned the power source on it would have gone off and that would have blown up the mine."

Police said a number of Peabody employees had been questioned and that they have a suspect in the case.

"I would rather not say what we think the motive was," a police spokesman said. "We hope to make an arrest soon but our investigation is continuing."

Carter Aims for Growth

WASHINGTON (TNS) — President-elect Jimmy Carter Tuesday outlined economic goals of a six per cent growth rate and a 1.5 per cent unemployment reduction in 1977.

At a series of closed-door meetings on Capitol Hill the Georgian made a positive impression on leaders of both parties as he repeatedly pledged to consult with Congress on appointments and to co-operate on both foreign and domestic policy.

"The honeymoon has begun, and I feel that he intends it to be a long honeymoon," said Sen. Charles Percy.

Carter also praised President Ford on Tuesday for going "that extra mile" to help smooth the transition between administrations.

He said creating more jobs will be a major focus of his first months in office and expressed hope he can work out with congressional leaders, even before his inaugural, the outline of major legislation aimed at putting the unemployed to work.

Carter said he wants to reduce unemployment, currently measured at 7.9 per cent of the work force or nearly eight million people, by 1.5 percentage points "and perhaps more" in his first year in office.

Legalese Made Easy

SEATTLE (AP) — Alan Siegel isn't one of those persons who groans or turns away when reading legal language. He rewrites it.

He rewrote this phrase:

"Upon the happening of an occurrence reasonably likely to involve the company hereunder, written notice shall be given as soon as practicable to the company . . . such notice shall contain particulars sufficient to identify the insured and the fullest information obtainable at the time. The insured shall give the notice of any claim made on the account of such occurrence."

The Siegel version:

"If there's an accident or incident that may be covered by this policy, notify us in writing as soon as possible. Include all the information you have or can get."

Siegel, 38, has formed a company that rewrites legal and confusing language. His clients include insurance companies, credit card firms, major corporations — anyone or anything that makes english harder than necessary.

The New York consultant, who recently spoke to the Bankers Association here, said lawyers are partially responsible for the language.

$1 Billion Debt Due

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City has a $1-billion bill coming due and it remains to be seen where the money will come from.

City, state and federal officials have been meeting on the problem since it arose out of a state court decision last Friday that declared unconstitutional a three-year postponement on repayment of $1.6 billion in city notes.

Treasury Secretary William Simon says the federal government will keep its commitment to lend the city $770 million in December, despite the court ruling that has deepened New York's financial crisis.

However, that money is needed to meet payrolls and cover other expenses.

Observers expect other funds will be sought during negotiations among the three branches of government, banks and the city union pension funds during the next month.

Students Reject Drugs . . . Except for Marijuana

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government survey made public Tuesday shows that American young people are using marijuana more often, but the overwhelming majority continues to frown on other drugs.

The survey of 17,000 high school seniors showed that almost 53 per cent said they had tried marijuana at some point and one out of five had used the drug at least 20 times during the preceding year.

Eight per cent said they had smoked marijuana almost daily during the month preceding the survey.

The poll of the 1976 graduating classes of 130 schools across the United States was conducted by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research. The study was commissioned by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, which made public the findings.

Dr. Robert DuPont, director of the research institute, told a news conference that the survey of high school seniors and two related studies "represent major advances in our knowledge" about drug abuse trends.

"The problem is not going away," he said. "On the other hand, we are not reporting any dramatic upturn either."

He said the studies show "an apparent stabilization in drug use and the attiudes toward drugs in general. There is a very strong strain of conservative attitudes in the American public toward drug use."

Questioned about their attitudes toward drugs, more than 80 per cent of the 1976 class said they disapproved of experimenting with LSD, cocaine and barbiturates and more than 90 per cent frowned on trying heroin. About 75 per cent disapproved of trying amphetamines.

Virtually all disapproved of regular use of any of those drugs.

Hoover's Files Scandal-Filled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Justice Department summaries on the late FBI director Edgar Hoover's official and confidential files would make the hottest reading in town, if you could only fill in the blanks.

The summaries — each a few lines describing contents of each file folder — are riddled with blank spaces showing that names and other details were deleted. The result is more suggestive than revealing.

But one name — Hoover's — was never erased. His files included accusations that he was a homosexual.

Scandals were not neglected. One 67-page file covering a 1958-65 period bore this description:

"Contains almost entirely letters to Hoover from ... Washington field office containing general immoral or criminal activities on the part of diplomats, government employees, politicians, sport figures, socially prominent persons, senators and congressfen."

These were not the personal files that were removed and destroyed after Hoover's death in 1972. They were called his "confidential and official" files, which he kept in his own office.

FBI agents drafted the summaries in February, 1975, and they were used by Attorney General Edward Levi in Congressional testimony about the files.

The summaries were made public as a result of a suit under the Freedom of Information Act by Morton Halperin, a former national security council staff member whose phone was tapped by the FBI.

The result is a history of subversion, scandal, race relations, crime and investigation, affairs of state and top secret intelligence — but almost all names and virtually all details erased.

There were numerous accusations about prominent men being homosexuals. Several files, according to the summaries, also concerned "gossip ... to the effect Mr. Hoover was a homosexual."

One memo, the summary said, names "at least 23 people who are reportedly involved in a smear campaign (against Hoover) ... some are identified as Congressmen."

The summaries refer to FBI surveillance and show Hoover more than once resisted efforts of other officials to have more.

In 1940 Hoover refused to investigate Wendell Willkie, then a Republican presidential nominee, because "The FBI wiould be accused of conducting a political investigation."

Another file shows Hoover issued the order: "No more such techniques must be used."

Reds Match Poseidon

WASHINGTON (WP) The Soviets for the first time have fired a submarine missile with multiple warheads which can be guided independently to different targets.

The firing at sea was a milestone event in that the Soviet Union displayed it had had developed the MIRV (multiple-independently-guided re-entry vehicle) technique for submarine missiles.

But since the United States has Poseidon missiles with MIRV warheads deployed at sea on submarines already on station, the Soviet test was described by one source Tuesday night "as no big deal."

Soviet Killer Satellites Denied by U.S. Officials

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Soviet Union conducted two tests of a killer satellite this year, failing both times to come close enough to an orbiting target to destroy it, U.S. government sources said Tuesday.

The two failures—on April 13 and July 21—followed a previously reported successful test of an "intercept-and-destroy satellite" last February, the sources said.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) denied reports in two U.S. magazines this week that the Soviet Union had damaged one orbiting U.S. satellite and destroyed another within the last year.

ACDA Deputy Director John Lahman said the reports, in Newsweek and Penthouse magazines, have no foundation.

In all three Soviet tests of killer satellites, the orbiting target was a Soviet — not an American — satellite, the souces said.

On Feb. 16, the Soviets manoeuvred Cosmos 804 within 3,000 feet of the target satellite, Cosmos 803. This was close enough to destroy the target if Cosmos 804 had been detonated, the sources said.

On April 13, an unsuccessful attempt was made to bring Cosmos 814 close enough to 803 for a simulated destruction.

On July 21, a similar attempt was made with Cosmos satellites 839 and 842. Cosmos 842 crashed into the ocean near New Zealand, the sources said.

Buckling Down, Soviet-Style

BERLIN (AP) — Red Army belts with shiny brass buckles have caught the fancy of souvenir-hunting American GIs in Berlin.

Cigarettes, girlie magazines and money may be used to lure a belt and a buckle from the Soviet soldiers who guard Allied crossing points in and out of West Berlin.

Officially, the United States military command frowns on the practice. Unofficially, it is tolerated.

The belts and buckles hold up jeans and are worn as decoration over blouses and sweaters for just about every kind of occasion—shopping, football games, cocktail parties.

The Red Army buckle has a large star and hammer-and-sickle emblem on it so that it is easily recognizable even from a distance.

The Russians wear the belts outside over their uniform jackets.

The belt itself is of good-quality leather. How much it costs a Russian soldier is not known. Nor is it apparent how Soviet commanders are reacting to what must be a run on Red Army belt supplies in East Germany.

Informants say getting a souvenir belt can work like this:

On presenting his travel credentials at a border-crossing point, a soldier, airman or U.S. mission civilian waits in a room that provides the Soviet Communist newspaper Pravda and an East German television set.

As the GI waits, a Russian soldier outside the building, the same one who salutes him in and back out of the checkpoint, often appears at a window. He makes a sign asking the American if he has cigarettes. The basis for a possible transaction has been established.

Or inside the building, an American is kept waiting until a one-to-one situation is possible. Then a Russian comes out of a hidden control room with a belt and freshly polished buckle in his hand.

Without saying a word, he holds it up. It is up to the American to respond. Sign language fixes a price.

A well-placed military source said it used to be that a girlie magazine shoved through a control room aperture along with credentials was enough to bring out a belt and buckle in return.

"The price of a belt in good condition first went up to a carton of cigarettes," the source said. "But lately the Russians have been making it plain they want from $6 to $12."

"I get the impression that the Russians would sell us their whole uniform for cigarettes, lighters, ballpoint pens and those centrefold magazines, not to mention money, if they could get away with it," another soldier said.

Back home in the States, a high school student has reported gleefully, he was able to resell a Russian army belt for $30.

Tax-Sharing Scheme Seen More Efficient

VANCOUVER (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday that federal tax-sharing proposals to be debated at a federal-provincial finance minister's meeting next month will benefit both provinces and taxpayers by encouraging more efficient delivery of services and reduced rates of increase in costs.

In a text for a speech to the Canadian Tax Foundation, released in Ottawa, Macondald said federal proposals call for cash transfers which will grow with the economy and a transfer of taxing powers to the provinces. The amounts would be independent of provincial spending.

At present, Ottawa pays an

At present, Ottawa pays an average 50 per cent of health and post-secondary education costs.

But Macdonald said the federal government wants to do away with the existing formula for sharing of about $5 billion in order to control rising costs. Some of the provinces have been opposed to changes.

"Our estimates indicate that the provinces are likely to obtain some financial advantage by adopting our proposals," the finance minister said. "In the long run, the provinces and the taxpayer will benefit by a more efficient delivery of services and by a probable reduction in the rate of increase in costs."

Macdonald said under present arrangements there is no incentive for provinces to reduce costs.

"If a province spends a dollar . . . it receives a matching federal dollar. If a province finds a way to save a dollar, it gives up a potential dollar of federal sharing."

A formula that unties Ottawa from spending by the provinces would allow provinces to collect a specific amount from the federal government whether or not they spend their own funds.

Ottawa would also ask for the first time to have a "place at the table in discussion of national education standards," he said.

He said he was eager to discuss the federal proposals with all ministers, including the Quebec representative, at the Dec. 6 and 7 meeting.

The new Quebec minister, expected to be Jacques Parizeau, will only be appointed Friday and will have about 10 days to prepare Quebec's position for the conference.

Indian Fishing Extended

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand Tuesday announced an extension of the Indian Fishermen's assistance program which was due to end in March, 1977.

The program, which has already cost the federal government about $17 million in its eight-year lifespan, will continue until 1978 with an additional $1,183,000 in grants to be made available to native Indian commercial fishermen needing financial aid to equip their vessels, the minister said.

The interim extension will last only until a program re-evaluation has been completed at which time the minister will make recommendations for an alternative program.

But Gilbert Cook, B.C. Native Brotherhood vice-president, was not convinced a new program similarly administered will solve the problems inherent in the current program.

He told Allmand that there seems to be a large buffer area between the native people and the Department of Indian Affairs and suggestions from native Indians are lost in between.

Fish Patrol Costs Add $8 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Surveillance of the 200-mile fishing zone which goes into effect Jan. 1 will add about $8 million to federal operating costs yearly, Fisheries and Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Tuesday.

He told the Commons fisheries and forestry committee his department plans to pare $3.9 million from its 1976-77 budget "to help defray the operating costs to those other departments for vessels and planes used in surveillance."

Conservative environment critic Bill Jarvis (Perth-Wilmot) said nearly $3 million of that would come from the budget of the federal environment department.

"We are presiding over today what can only be described as the rape of the environment department," he said. "The minister is stealing funds from the environment department because he is preoccupied with the fishery side of his portfolio."

LeBlanc replied that the fishery and marine services had also had spending this year pared by $1.6 million, so the environment part of his portfolio isn't suffering alone.

U.S. Urged To Pay Bill

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The United States should pay Canada the costs of flood control works required in Manitoba when flood control projects planned by Minnesota are undertaken on the Roseau River.

That was a recommendation of the International Joint Commission in a report made to the governments of Canada and the United States. It was issued Tuesday.

The increased flooding that would occur in Manitoba if the proposed channel modifications in the U.S. were constructed can be largely offset by the timely construction of mitigating works, according to the report.

The commission cautioned that an agreed upon schedule for construction of these mitigating works in Canada should precede channel modifications in the United States.

Historic Site Visits Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — Visits to national historic parks and sites are down this year and Parks Canada officials are offering the American bicentennial as part of the reason.

Figures released Tuesday show that 173,445 fewer persons visited the 52 historic locations between April 1 and Sept. 30. The actual percentage decline is only five per cent, but attendance dropped at almost two-thirds of the federally maintained sites.

All regions, except the Prairies, suffered declines.

Visits were down 21 per cent in the Alberta-British Columbia region, 13 per cent in Quebec, three per cent in the Atlantic region, and two per cent in Ontario. Prairie region attendance was up two per cent.

The national parks fared better with a two-per-cent over-all increase in attendance, 203,611 more people than in the April-September period last year.

A total of 13,463,324 persons visited the parks compared with 13,259,713 during the six-month peak season last year.

The two-per-cent increase follows a year of declining attendance at national parks. Officials say visits dropped about 15 per cent in 1975, mainly because of higher travel costs.

This year's figures show a three-per-cent decline at Atlantic region parks, a 12 per cent increase in Quebec, and an 11-per-cent drop in Ontario. Visits in Manitoba and Saskatchewan were up 13 per cent and three per cent in Alberta and B.C.

Banff continued to be Canada's most popular national park. It attracted 1.8 million visitors in the six months, a decline of one per cent.

Behind Banff were Kootenay in B.C. 1.6 million, up 11 per cent; Prince Edward Island 1.3 million, down 1 per cent; and Jasper 1.29 million, up two per cent.

Little Tension at N.B. Prison

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — A rosy, almost idyllic picture of century-old Dorchester, the Atlantic region's only maximum security penitentiary, was drawn Monday night for a special Commons subcommittee as it began a cross-country look at federal prisons.

The 13-member subcommittee, accompanied by 20 clerks, interpreters, technicians and researchers, visits Dorchester, 25 miles south of here, today.

The subcommittee is looking for solutions to the problems — riots, hostage takings, embittered guards — that have plagued the prisons in recent years.

"If you're going to reduce tension, you have to attract and retain staff," advised John L. Bennett, Atlantic regional director of the penitentiary service, as members questioned him during a subcommittee session here.

He said the low turnover of Dorcsester's staff of 339 — there are about 315 prisoners—meant that experienced guards were able to deal efficiently with problems.

"We don't have programs to reduce conflict (between officials and guards) because conflict does not exist," he told Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon).

"Tell us why your region is running smoothly and British Columbia isn't?" asked John Reynolds (PC — Burnaby-Delta-Richmond).

"Our staff look upon it is a career rather than a job," Bennett said. "The salaries attract and retain employees."

A labor-management team approach was started here three years ago and is a success, he said.

"Why didn't it work in B.C. when it worked so well here?" Reynolds asked.

Bennett didn't answer the question directly but the subcommittee has been told in earlier hearings that high staff turnover is a serious problem in B.C.

Dorchester director Humphrey Sheehan could recall only five hostage takings at the prison since 1967. In the latest, Oct. 27, two guards were held by two prisoners. The incident ended 27 hours later without injury.

It followed by a month destructive riots in penitentiaries at New Westminster, Millhaven, Ont., and Laval, Que., as well as hostage takings in these and other prisons.

Sheehan said the hostage taking at Dorchester apparently was impulsive and wasn't accompanied by trouble from the other prisoners.

Bennett said only about one-third of the 315 prisoners at Dorchester should be in a maximum security prison. About 25 trouble makers were isolated in segregation cells, accounting for the day-to-day calm.

In a new 180-man maximum security prison to be built near Dorchester, those in isolation would be even more isolated. However, they would get four hours a day exercise time instead of the current half hour outside their cells.

Most of Dorchester's population would be moved to a medium security prison near Saint John, N.B., next summer.

H. W. Watson, regional director for inmate programs, said only one prisoner in three takes trades or academic training. Most aren't interested.

He said an unwilling student in prison can sabotage equipment and disrupt the whole class.

Bennett added that most prisoners go to half-way houses in Halifax or Saint John and have little trouble getting jobs. Mr. Sheehan said few prisoners are in for drug-related offences.

"No wonder you're doing all right," Stu Laggatt (NDP — New Westminster) observed.

TRIDENT FOES JAILED

SEATTLE (AP) — U.S. magistrate John Weinberg sentenced five members of the Pacific Life community Tuesday on convictions stemming from a protest demonstration at the Trident submarine base at Bangor, Wash.

Four were convicted Nov. 4 of trespassing on and damaging government property during an anti-Trudent demonstration Aug. 8. Carolyn Wildflower of Seattle was convicted of illegally entering the base after receiving an eviction notice during an earlier Trident demonstration. Their sentences on the convictions will run concurrently.

Shelly Douglass of New Westminster was sentenced to a total of 60 days in jail. Her 60-day and 30-day sentences will run concurrently. Her husband, James, will spend a total of 90 days in jail.

Her husband went limp and was dragged from the magistrate's courtroom midway through the sentencing.

Two deputy U.S. marshals followed Weinberg's order to remove Douglass after he refused to refrain from discussing Canadian-American relations. Douglass attempted to read a statement dealing with relations between the two countries.

Other sentences were 90 days for John William, 89 days for Jo Maynes, and 30 days for Carolyn Wildflower, all of Seattle.

Laurel Raymond of Seattle, also scheduled to be sentenced, did not appear in court.

During their trial, each member of the pacifist community told Weinberg he or she committed the acts of protest because of a belief that the Trident project is immoral.

Dog Meat Banned

TAIPEI (Reuter) — Taiwan banned dog meat from restaurant menus Tuesday. Some people here consider dog meat a tonic when eaten in winter.

Contracts Vital If You're Cohabiting

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The use of civil contracts to divide property rights and responsibilities of cohabiting couples is growing—but slowly—in the capital.

"There's not enough of it," said lawyer Marney Stevenson, who says people who live together do not appreciate their vulnerability when informal arrangements break up.

She said the two areas of greatest concern are the ownership of the residence and the maintenance of children in the event of a parting.

Her colleague, Robert Doell, said his practice indicates people most conscious of property problems are people who have been through a divorce proceeding and are anxious to avoid future problems in subseqdent unmarried living arrangements.

"The main asset is the house, and once that is in joint names, that pretty well looks after the situation," Stevenson said.

People who opt to acquire property jointly may take the step of registering the title in both their names without undertaking further contractual obligations.

But the trend elsewhere appears to be a desire to go further, listing all major items of household goods, cars, recreational equipment and specifying who owns it or would be entitled to it on termination of the agreement.

Some contracts specify a time while others remain open as to dissolution. A few anticipate termination to the point where matters of child custody and visiting rights are set down, and even such intangibles as the social behavior of the other party or intimacy with third parties.

"Basically, more and more people are treating marriage on a new footing," said Doell. "They decide not to be married but want to live together and agree to share property as joint assets."

"By means of the contract they can set out in black and white what most marriages didn't do before. Or they can show where they are not sharing each other's assets, that they are not getting married to take over the other's assets."

Those who are making such arrangments see the method as a means of avoiding conflict if they decide to go separate ways.

"Love doesn't enter into it: it doesn't get in the way of discussion," Doell said.

"Only the liberated people get around to thinking like this," he added.

But they realize—perhaps from experience—that "divorce is a very messy and bitter situation," especially where there is no division of property legislation.

About half the U.S. states have such legislation, often called Division of Marital Property Act, but such a law is still three or four years distant in Canada, Doell said.

The contract method of dealing with common property was virtually unheard of five years ago. It has become fairly common among divorced people, who according to Doell, "don't want to go through the mess again with second-time involvements."

MORE — MORE—

The numbers are bound to increase.

According to latest figures, the rate of divorces in Canada in 1975 rose 10 per cent from the 45,000 recorded in the previous year.

And the 1974 figure was fivefold the number of divorces in 1964.

The purely businesslike advantage of having property lines spelled out can be seen if, for example, Ms. Jones who is a working mother and living with John Doakes, helps pay for the living room suite that Doakes charged at a department store.

She might have paid for the entire set — sofa, lazyboy and footstool — but she could have a hard time proving it and might have to resort to a lawsuit to claim her right, come separation day.

Or maybe John helped Ms. Jones with her car payments and made the final instalment just in time to see her drive off into the sunset.

The disadvantage of a formal property contract is that it needs regular updating, or a built-in system of bookkeeping to show who pays for what, and that can grow tiresome.

It may even evolve into mutual trust, which puts the participants back to square one as if they were married.

Chartered accountant David Moore said there is a tax advantage to unmarried couples one works for the other, or where one lives at home to care for the claimant's children.

"In the case of self-employed man or partner in business, he can't deduct any salary paid to his wife. That's it in a nutshell," Moore said.

Inevitably, Moore points out, the other party is involved with the enterprise by minding the store, keeping the books or in many different ways.

Yet, like the wife of the farmer, all income is taxed in the name of the farmer.

If the owner lives with a woman who is not his wife, there is nothing to stop him paying her a salary for the work she does in the business, and thus he gains a deduction.

Or if the woman cares for his family he can pay her a child-care allowance up to $500 a year per child to a maximum $2,000 — in effect a tax-free present for the partner if she has no other income.

When each member of the unmarriage earns in excess of $20,000 a year, the rules change to eliminate any tax advantage to the arrangement.

Moore said in dealing with personal income tax accounts in recent years, there has been a noticeable increase in unmarried couples of the 18-28 age group.

Lawyers, on the other hand, appear to find the most response to cohabiting among people 35-45, perhaps because many have already had marital experience.

Most, said Doell, appear to know just what they want to do and merely get the lawyer to set it into contract form, for a fee generally under $100.

WIN OR LOSE on Grey Cup day, your guests will enjoy Mary Moore's miniature pork pies, spicy meat balls and sweet 'n sour spareribs.

MARY MOORE

Add a Tasty Touch To Grey Cup Game

For the past few years I have been giving you a party dish to serve to your guests on Grey Cup day. Some are lucky enough to go to the game. Others are gathered around TV sets and whether their team wins or loses, they are hungry afterwards.

I have three recipes for you: miniature pork pies, spicy pork balls to serve in your chafing dish and sweet 'n sour spareribs with a new orangy sauce.

All together they were beautiful on our buffet table and I fondly hope you will make them all for your guests to enjoy.

MINIATURE PORK PIES

Tender pastry sufficient for a two-crust pie
1 lb. lean minced pork
¼ c. chopped onion
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. basil or summer savory
Shake of pepper
Shake of cloves
½ small bay leaf
¼ c. boiling water
2 tbsp. whole wheat (or white) breadcrumbs

Mix together pork, onion, seasonings and water. Simmer 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove bay leaf. Drain off excess liquid. Stir in breadcrumbs. Line 2" tart tins with pastry. Fill shells with 1 tablespoon pork mixture. Cover with pastry rounds and seal edges. Cut small steam vent in top crust. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 15 to 20 minutes, makes 24.

SPICY PORK BALLS

Pork Balls:
1½ lbs. lean minced pork
1 c. finely chopped onion
1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. ginger
1 beaten egg
1 tbsp. fat or oil
1 c. chopped onion

Sauce:
2 cloves garlic, crushed (optional)
8 c. peeled cut up fresh tomatoes or 8 c. canned
1½ tsp. salt
2 tsp. sugar
½ tsp. oregano
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. crushed chili peppers
1 bay leaf
3 drops tobasco sauce

To make Pork Balls mix pork, onion, seasonings and egg. Form into 1" balls. Brown meat balls in fat or oil until done (about 8 minutes). Remove from fat and drain on paper towel. Reserve 2 tablespoons fat in pan. Keep meat balls very warm in oven.

To prepare Sauce in the 2 tablespoons fat in pan saute onion until transparent. Add remaining sauce ingredients, and simmer uncovered until reduced to sauce consistency —about 1 hour. Pour sauce over meat balls. Makes 30.

SWEET 'N SOUR SPARERIBS WITH ORANGE SAUCE

3 lbs. lean spareribs (see below)

Sauce:
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1¼ c. orange juice
2 tbsp. grated orange rind
6 tbsp. honey
2 tbsp. cornstarch

You must ask your butcher to cut the spareribs into 1" lengths and of course into individual ribs. (Unless you have a husband who will wield a cleaver neatly and safely.)

Arrange the ribs in a 13x9" baking dish. (I used pyrex.) Bake uncovered 1½ hours at 350 deg. Fahr. turning twice. Cautiously drain off all fat.

Meanwhile make the Sauce by mixing together the orange rind and cornstarch until blended then add lemon juice, orange juice and honey and stir over medium-high until thick and clear. Pour boiling hot over hot drained baked spareribs.

Chilled Vegetable Salad Provides Lots of Crunch

tiny bennett

Some years ago at a surprise party a group of us put on for newly married friends, I ran into a chilled vegetable salad for the very first time.

All the food at the party was home-cooked and showed a very high standard, but I was particularly taken by the vegetable salad made up from beans — green beans, lima beans, yellow beans and so on.

Vegetable salads do indeed lend themselves to entertaining since they can be quite dramatic and provide an inexpensive combination vegetable and salad course to offset entree dishes.

About the only complaint I can make about them is that if care is not taken they can turn out to be a bit soggy. Recently, however, I ran into a really different version of this dish that was crunchy and delicious, and so flavorful that I have now included it in my diet whenever the produce counter is filled with fresh vegetables straight from the fields.

In honor of the special event at which I tasted this dish, I have renamed it.

BINDERTWINE VEGETABLE SALAD

The very kind lady who passed this on to me said that it came from Sweden. The recipe I present here can be altered to individual tastes and to the availability of fresh produce.

For this salad you will need 1½ cups diced cooked carrots, 1¼ cups sliced cooked cauliflower, 1½ cups cooked green peas, 1½ cups sliced cooked green beans, ½ cup peeled and chopped mild onion (raw), ½ cup raw chopped celery, and one cup chopped canned artichoke hearts drained of oil.

Take note that all of the vegetables listed have a crunchy texture. It is essential only to use fresh vegetables and to cook them in the French manner to retain their crispness.

Prepare for cooking by topping and tailing, slicing and dicing and set to boil your largest, top-of-the-stove pot filled with salted water.

When the water reaches a high rolling boil, put in a batch of vegetables and keep the heat high so the water quickly returns to the boil. Each vegetable will have a different timing, so watch each carefully, testing by biting and when still crisp, strain and chill very rapidly in a very large amount of cold water. Leave the vegetable in the cold water for a few minutes while you do the next in line and then drain thoroughly and put into a mixing bowl.

This French system of cooking fresh vegetables is exactly like our system of preparing vegetables for freezing.

When all the cooked vegetables are in the bowl, add the onion, celery and artichoke hearts and toss the contents in a sharp French dressing made as follows.

Using a screwtop mason jar as a convenient container, blend in three tablespoons wine vinegar or the same amount of half vinegar, half lemon juice, ⅛ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, good grind of black pepper, and seven tablespoons salad oil, or olive oil, and with the top tightly screwed down, shake vigorously for a good minute. I also add a big pinch of dried tarragon, but this is optional.

Leave vegetables in this for several hours in a cool place to blend flavors and then drain and discard the French dressing.

Put the glistening, crisp vegetables in a suitable serving bowl, and add and toss ¾ cups mayonnaise, ¼ cup chili sauce, two teaspoons ground dried dill, one tablespoon lemon juice and salt and ground black pepper to taste.

When the vegetables are thoroughly tossed, chill and serve very cold indeed.

This makes about eight cups (12 servings) and the quantity can be reduced or enlarged with ease.

The variations of this salad are endless since the choice or selection of vegetable ingredients is only limited by the fact that they must have a suitably crunchy texture. For example, you can make an all bean salad, with maybe the onion and celery added as a nice taste touch. Broccoli might also be used if it is available fresh.

Little Difference

White pepper, which is a seed, is practically the same as black pepper except that the outer shell or pericarp of the berry is removed.

Russian Tea

Adapted from an out-of-print cookbook of the 50s.

½ cup sugar
2-inch cinnamon stick
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1½ teaspoons grated orange rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup orange juice
¼ cup canned unsweetened pineapple juice
3 tablesoons loose tea.

Over moderate heat stir together the sugar, ¼ cup water, the cinnamon stick and grated rinds until sugar dissolves and mixture comes to a boil; boil 5 minutes. Remove cinnamon stick. Stir in fruit juices and keep hot but do not boil. Steep tea in 3 cups boiling water for 5 minutes; strain into other mixture; stir well. Serve hot in tea or punch cups. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Can One Wrinkle Lead To A "Prune Face"?

Can neglect—failure to take action against wrinkle-causing dryness lead to shriveled facial lines like the skin on a prune? Yes, your surface skin, like that of a prune, is pulled from beneath by the cells that shrink in size from lack of vital moisture. How can you put back moisture in your skin cells? Simply apply 2nd Début. It contains an anti-wrinkle ingredient CEF that carries water thru the skin surface to dry shrunken cells. As cells expand, they push out—lines and wrinkles fade—often even disappear. Skin softens . . . you should have a younger look . . . in just 10 days or money back. That younger look should last for years with continued use of 2nd Début. Ghana Drought Is Cause Of Chocolate Price Rise

Associated Press

Too much rain followed by a marathon drought in Africa has damaged Ghana's coca crops, driving up the cost of the bean and causing the price of chocolate to skyrocket. But chocolate is still one of man's favorite flavors.

The rich chocolate we know today is a far cry from the bitter draft that Hernando Cortez quaffed in the halls of Montezuma during the explorer's conquest of Mexico in the 16th century.

It was some time befor people enjoyed chocolate in its present form. Cocoa laced with chunks of hot pepper was a popular drink in the court of Charles II, since the ladies of that day were convinced that the fiery liquid would keep them slim.

Most Europeans found the flavor of cocoa too bitter for their liking, however. Then an enterprising chef hit upon the idea of sweetening it with sugar and opened up a whole new field of cooking.

Americans did not get their first taste of cocoa until 1755, and a decade later, John Hannon began manufacturing it in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. By 1900, the United States had become second only to Germany as the world's largest consumer of cocoa.

With the soaring price of the cocoa bean, confectioners have been casting about for some alternative. They have tried soybean, coconut and corn kernel oil, but coca butter must be an ingredient of candy in the U.S. before it can be labelled chocolate. Substitutions must be listed as "confectionery coating" or "compound coating" or some such designation.

According to a survey by the National Geographic Society, candy manufacturers have been at work in their laboratories trying to come up with an actual double for the costly cocoa bean, but so far most of the results have been rejected as gritty, waxy, flat or too sweet.

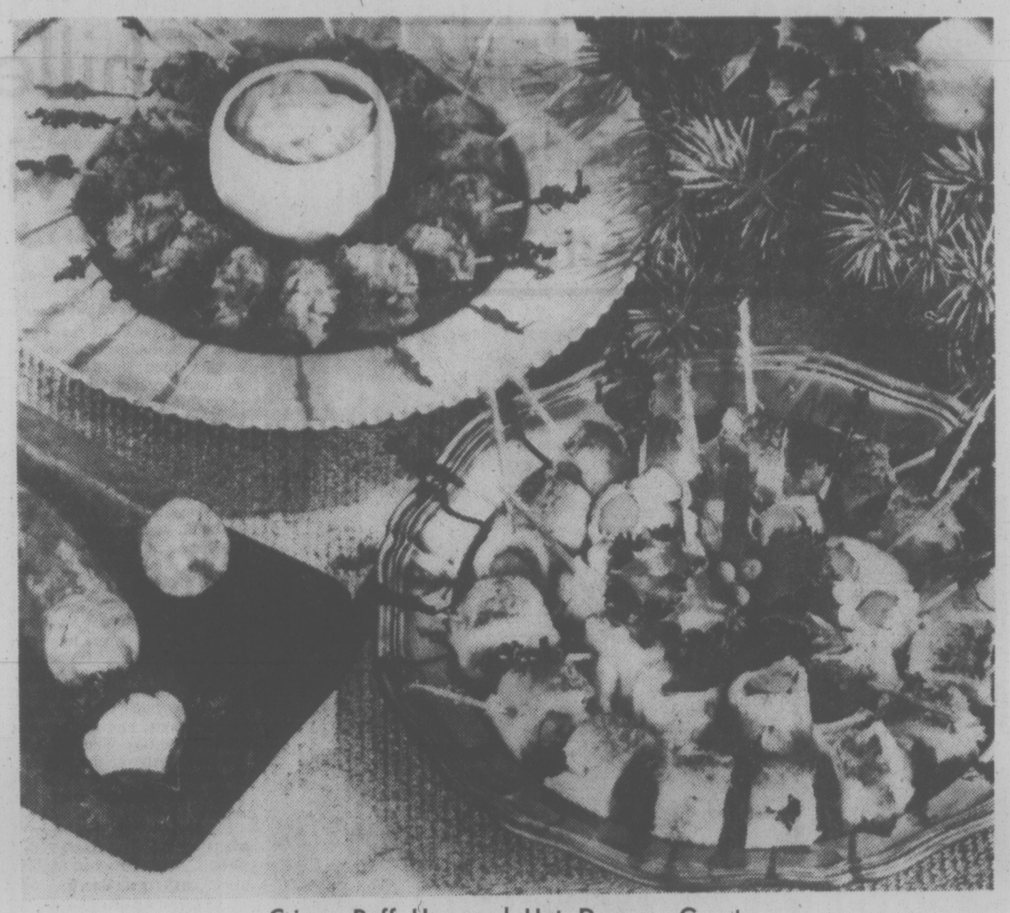
For those who wish to stick to cocoa, here's a simple recipe for a rich chocolate sauce from the files of food writer Carol Cutler.

⅓ cup sugar
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons cocoa
4 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons rum
1 tablespoon orange liqueur

Put all ingredients into blender and blend 1 minute. Pour sauce into small pan and bring to slow simmer. Simmer for 1 minute. Makes 2½ cups.

Meat Eating Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are eating more meat and fewer potatoes than they did 40 years ago, says the United States Census Bureau. Bureau data shows meat consumption has risen to 186 pounds per capita in 1970 from 117 pounds in 1935. Potato consumption has fallen from 198 pounds per capita in 1910 to 91 pounds in 1970.



Crispy Puff Ups and Hot Dog en Groute

Try Sausage Hors d'Oeuvres For Exciting Festive Treat

The season to be festive is approaching and what adds more to elegant entertaining than a table spread with exciting sausage hors d'oeuvres that are tasty and equally as easy to prepare.

Here's an international sausage buffet especially with the busy holiday hostess in mind. In selecting such world-wide favorites as bratwurst, salami, thuringer, frankfurters, bologna and ham, they have combined the warmth of old world hospitality with the appeal of hearty party food that tastes just as good cold as warm.

The variety and versatility of sausage provides every hostess with the ideal basic ingredients for developing unusual and tasty party foods.

Start off your hors d'oeuvre lineup with coconut coated Crispy Puffs and easy-to-make Hot Dog En Croute, speared on colorful toothpicks. As a party highlight, plan a Macedonine of Meat Fondue where guests can dunk chunks of smoked thuringer, Canadian Ham or soft salami in a blending of wine, Cheddar and Swiss cheese fondue.

CRISPY PUFF UPS

⅓ pound Bratwurst
⅓ pound Smoked Thuringer
⅓ pound Polish Sausage
¾ cup flour
2 eggs
¾ cup milk
2 cups shredded coconut
1 quart salad oil

Cut sausages at an angle into ½-inch slices. Blend eggs and milk in a small bowl. Dip sausages in water; dust with flour and then dip into eggs-milk mixture. Drain for a few seconds. Coat with coconut. Fry in 2 inches of salad oil heated to 350 degrees until crisp and golden. Serve with ketchup, horseradish or chutney butter. Make your own chutney butter by mixing equal parts chutney with mayonnaise. Yield: Approximately 20 to 24.

HOT DOG EN CROUTE

8 slices of white bread (crust trimmed)
8 tablespoons mayonnaise
4 teaspoons mustard
4 teaspoons piccalilli
16 cocktail franks
16 toothpicks
16 frilled toothpicks

Spread mayonnaise, mustard and picalilli on each slice of bread. Place 2 cocktail franks on each slice of bread and roll up. Place seam down on a greased baking pan and secure with toothpicks. Broil until bread is evenly browned. Remove toothpicks. Place 4 frilled toothpicks equally spaced on each roll. Slice between each pick to make 4 equal pieces. Serve with your favorite dip. Yield: 32 appetizers.

MACEDONINE OF MEAT FONDUE

1 pound shredded Swiss cheese
6 ounces shredded Cheddar cheese
4 tablespoons flour
2 dashes Tabasco
2 dashes Worcestershire Sauce
1 cup white wine
½ pound Canadian Ham (cut in ¾-inch cubes)
½ pound smoked thuringer (cut ⅛-inch slices)
½ pound cocktail franks

Combine all ingredients except the sausages in a saucepan. Blend over medium heat, stirring constantly until all cheese is melted. Do not boil. Transfer into fondue pot and keep warm. Broil or saute sausages until hot. Arrange attractively on a serving tray. You may want to garnish the arrangement with parsley and cherry tomatoes. Provide fondue forks or long wooden skewers for dipping. Serves 10.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Our tomatoes are still coming, faster than we can eat them. Growing our own food is really so beautiful. So far we've had tomato soup, tomato sauce, tomato juice, tomato salad, tomato sandwiches, fasted on tomatoes and made tomato facials.

Last night we whipped up tomato quiche and, since it was so delicious, easy and inexpensive, we want to share it with you.

GROW YOUR OWN TOMATO QUICHE

½ lb. Gruyere cheese, shredded
1 9-in. unbaked pastry shell (frozen ok)
3 medium tomatoes, peeled, chopped and drained
8 medium mushrooms, sauteed in butter
1 onion, chopped fine, steamed until soft parsley
2 tsp. basil (grown in herb garden)
¾ cup milk
1 tbsp. grated Parmesan cheese season to taste

Scatter Gruyere cheese over pastry shell. Make a layer of tomatoes over cheese. Add onions, mushrooms, basil and seasoning. Beat eggs and milk together and pour over tomatoes. Sprinkle on Parmesan. Bake 45 minutes in 350 deg. oven. Serve with sprig of parsley. Serves six easily.

Tomato quiche has the gourmet touch, ideal for bachelors and great when hungry friends drop in. If you need any tomatoes, call us.

Give the Bible Back

DEAR ABBY: How does one go about marketing a genuine Gutenberg Bible? It was stolen from a German museum during the Second World War by a soldier who has been dead for many years.

Is it still considered "stolen goods"? Or is it possible to sell it legitimately? — HAVE ONE

DEAR HAVE: Regardless of how long ago the article was stolen, it's still stolen property and cannot be sold legitimately. And since you know that it was stolen from a museum in Germany, you have a moral obligation to return it to the German government.

The German embassy would deeply appreciate hearing from you. I urge you to contact them.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 19 and have a bum for a boyfriend. Ken and I love each other very much and plan on getting married some day, but I don't want a bum for a husband.

He's 25, but very immature in many ways. Ken has never kept a job for more than three months. He quits and lays around collecting unemployment. When I get on his back because I practically have to support him, he gets another job, but it never lasts very long.

When I lecture him about his laziness, he says if I really loved him I wouldn't try to change him. Abby, I DO love him, but I don't want to support him the rest of his life.

I'm very ambitious. I've worked since I was 16, and keep getting promotions. What should I do? Say goodbye t the only guy I've ever loved, or accept him as he is and quit trying to change him? — "19 AND AMBITIOUS"

DEAR "19": I think you really want to break up with Ken, but you want me to make the decision for you, which says something about your own immaturity. I can't see this "bum" being anything more than a bum, married or single. And until you can, don't waste any more time on him.

Seafood Mousse

1 envelope unflavored gelating
¼ cup water
10¾ ounce can condensed tomato soup, undiluted
8-ounce package cream cheese
1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup cooked shrimp cut fine or 1 can about 7 ounces tuna or salmon drained and flaked
½ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup finely chopped celery.

Soften the gelatin in the water; dissolve over hot water stirring constantly. Over low heat, beat together the tomato soup and cream cheese until smooth and hot; off heat stir in the gelatin; cool. Thoroughly stir in the remaining ingredients. Turn into a 4 to 5-cup mold; chill until firm. Unmold and serve with party-style (small slices) rye bread.

Cookies Can Be Thoughtful Gift

hilda beastall

Cookies made at home with rye, oat and wheat grains plus fruits and raw nuts (not previously roasted nor salted) are good food for lunch boxes, after-school snacks and with fresh fruit at suppertime. When they contain a minimum of added sugar, apart from that in the fruit and grains, they can be rated as extra good.

These recipes will be useful for cookie making as thoughtful gifts to people who are not able to bake for themselves yet are probably craving and certainly needing these good little extras.

PEANUT FRUIT SQUARES

½ cup soft margarine
1 Tbsp dark molasses
1 Tbsp brown sugar
2 small eggs
¾ cup wholewheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
½ cup ground raw peanuts
½ cup mixed chopped dates and raisins

Cream margarine, molasses, sugar and eggs in mixing bowl.

Measure and mix-in remaining ingredients.

Lightly grease a 6x10x2-inch pan (or similar size). Spread mixture smoothly.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for about 30 minutes or until a clean knife comes out clean.

Cut into 15 squares, at once; allow to partially cool in pan. Remove and allow to finish cooling upside down. This is a chewy, flavorful fruit square, a favorite with all.

MOLASSES GINGER DROP COOKIES

½ cup soft margarine
2 Tbsp brown sugar
2 Tbsp dark molasses
2 small eggs
1 cup unbleached flour
¼ cup wheat germ
1 cup wholewheat flour
1 tsp baking powder
¼ tsp salt
¼ tsp powdered ginger OR ½ tsp chopped candied ginger

Cream margarine with sugar and molasses. Beat in eggs with wooden spoon.

Measure dry ingredients into sifter, and add to creamed mixture, tossing in wheat germ and candied ginger (if used), at the end.

The candied ginger adds a distinct change, and is pleasant to come across in a cookie. (It also enhances vegetable soup flavors).

Drop from teaspoon in small mounds on a greased cookie sheet. Flatten a little with back of spoon. Makes about 4 dozen cookies.

Bake in fairly hot oven at 190 deg. C. until becoming brown. Don't let them scorch.

RAISIN OAT COOKIES

4 Tbsp soft margarine
1 Tbsp brown sugar
1 small egg
½ cup wholewheat flour
½ tsp baking powder
¼ tsp salt
¼ cup skim milk powder
½ cup wheat germ
1 cup oat flakes
about ¼ cup water
½ cup raisins

Cream margarine with sugar. Add egg and beat with wooden spoon.

Measure flour, baking powder, salt and milk powder into sifter. Add to creamed mixture and mix well. Add oat flakes and stir in with just enough water to make a stiff dough for drop cookies. Add and stir in raisins.

Drop by small spoonfuls on greased cookie sheet. Try to cover raisins with a film of dough to prevent scorched fruit.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for about 20 minutes until lightly brown. Makes about 30 cookies.

When substituting oil for margarine, a little more flour may be needed.

MSG May Be Causing Those After-Effects

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

Have you ever noticed after eating Chinese food that you're very thirsty, or perhaps have a headache, or feel that your eyelids are very heavy? All these symptoms, and more, were reported by a Chinese physician in the New England Journal of Medicine in 1968. In the same year, several other researchers looked into what has often been called "Chinese restaurant syndrome" and determined that the strange after-effects were due to the monosodium glutamate (MSG) often added in liberal amounts to Chinese foods.

Not everyone will notice these symptoms, or experience any discomfort at all after eating Chinese food. But some people are sensitive to MSG and will react to it. (A recent study out of Harvard showed that probably one in every four people is, to some degree, sensitive to MSG.)

What is monosodium glutamate? It's a flavor enhancer — not a flavoring substance. It brings out the flavor in certain foods, supposedly by exciting certain of your taste buds or nerves. It's a selective process: affecting only meat-like and vegetable-like flavors, and not the fruit flavors. The more monosodium glutamate you add, the more the flavors of those certain foods will be "enhanced".

Is MSG used only in Chinese restaurants? No. It is added to many other foods. Check the labels on foods you buy and you'll probably find MSG listed as an ingredient. 'Accent' is pure MSG. Soya sauce has salt and MSG. Many commercial brands of ready-to-eat dishes, such as meat, poultry, fish, casseroles, gravies, soups, stews, vegetables and salads contain MSG.

There are certain dangers inherent in the wide-spread use of this additive. Many people on low sodium diets tend to use MSG as a salt substitute. What they don't realize is that the MSG, which must be used in larger amounts than salt (it takes as salt to make something taste salty), contributes significant amounts of sodium about 3 times as much MSG to their diets. In fact, the MSG will give them more salt than salt would.

MSG has no nutritional value. You'll probably be healthier for not having it in your diet. Or you may even find the flavor of the foods you eat — without salt and without "enhancers" — very pleasing.

Opening Door to the Oven Does Your Baking No Good

TORONTO (CP) — Constant opening of the oven door to check on your baking cake doesn't do it any good, says Ontario's Energy Conservation Group.

With each peep you lose 25 degrees of oven temperature, and this often means a cake that doesn't rise.

Marcia Dorfman, information officer for the group, says that jacking up the thermostat to 500 degrees to get the temperature to 350 in a hurry does not work.

She suggests setting the thermostat at the desired temperature when preheating the oven.

"It will preheat no faster but you do not waste energy if the dial is set higher," she says. "Also, cover saucepans whenever possible. Be sure the pots have tight-fitting lids because water will boil more quickly and the food cooks faster."

Once the water is boiling, Dorfman advises, turn the dial to the lowest heat that will keep it boiling.

"A higher setting will not increase the temperature of the water or speed up the cooking."

She says that a flame on a gas stove should just be touching the pot.

"You're only wasting gas by sending flames licking up the sides."

Be stingy with water when cooking vegetables, advises Dorfman.

"It itsn't necessary to cover them with water because the steam will cook them and this saves color and vitamins."

Pans make a difference. Heavy glass is not a good conductor of heat. Bright, shiny, straight pots with flat bottoms covering the full element are the best bet.

"Food baked in shallow, covered baking dishes cook more quickly," she says. "Cook vegetables in the bottom of a double boiler while heating a stew in the top part. Pressure cookers, of course, are good fuel savers."

Nostalgia Kick Reaches Cooking

MURPHYSBORO, Ill. (AP) — While America munches frozen dinners and such exotic dishes as Lobster Thermidor and Chicken Tetrazzini, Helen Walker Linsenmeyer evangelizes for simple fare.

The 70-year-old librarian is hoping to capitalize on what she calls "the nostalgia binge" with her new book, "Cooking Plain."

"There are no elaborate, fancy recipes such as we have today," she said. Instead, her recipes, saved from generations of southern Illinois, Indiana and Missouri families, feature the kind of fare that kept the settlers alive — fried squirrel, venison roast and molasses taffy.

Her book allows kitchen artists to recreate the mead wine served to militiamen of Jackson County, as well as sumac lemonade, Mrs. Linsenmeyer said. Other recipes tell how to prepare such little-known items as Mushroom Ketchup, Clover Bloom Vinegar, Head Cheese, Rose Hip Jam and Peach Leather.

The Last 20 Pounds Create a Problem

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

Five years ago, I weighed 365 pounds. With proper nutrition and exercise I got down to 205 pounds a year ago. I just can't lose the extra 20 pounds that my doctor thinks is so important for me. I still have a big appetite, which I try to satisfy with large salads and fruits. Can you tell me where there is, in a hot climate, a health resort that specializes in weight reduction? I am 52. — Mr. J. A. McN.

Dear Mr. McN.:

I am impressed by your remarkable accomplishment. To lose that much weight is a testimonial to the planned program that led to such success.

You seem to be psychologically distressed by your inability to lose an additional 20 pounds.

You must re-examine the amount and the kind of food that you now consume. It is obvious that your caloric intake is still greater than it should be.

Many people don't realize that even fruits and vegetables, when taken in large quantities, can accumulate more calories than the body needs for fuel.

Some fruits, especially dried or canned fruits, are extremely high in calories. The same can be said of a number of vegetables, such as beans, corn, sweet potatoes, chick peas, rice or lentils. Frying or the addition of butter or margarine will, of course, add to the calorie count. (You know, of course, that margarine is just as fattening as butter, although free of cholestrol.)

Count your calories again and see if they don't add up to a little more than you need.

The Medical Society in your city has a list of approved spas. With the discipline you are capable of, perhaps a short stay at one of these places might give you the extra push to attain the ideal weight you seek.

Whip Up a Gourmet Dish in No Time

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times

NEW YORK — Cook a gourmet meal in the time often required to cope with one dish? With inventiveness and a little planning, there is no reason why a working wife, a bachelor or a husband who likes to cook cannot prepare an elegant meal in under an hour. This column will devote itself to main courses and simple accompanying dishes that can be completed within 60 minutes.

Regardless of time, an inventive and qualified chef has two distinct avenues to follow: the classical and traditional or the improvisational. If he's adventurous, he'll indulge in both.

The age-old question is, of course, whether or not an established chef follows recipes when he or she cooks. The answer is no, but in a qualified sense. In strictly traditional matters, most chefs still refer to Escoffier, who has been called the Moses of classic French cookery.

The "quick" recipe with this article has nothing to do with the classics but, rather, is concerned with improvisation: I was challenged by a friend, who likes to serve margaritas before dinner, to concoct a dish with the same ingredients as that potent Mexican libation. My answer to the challenge was shrimp margarita. It has the same ingredients as the drink, with just one exception — the Cointreau or triple sec, either of which is too sweet, has been omitted.

One of the things essential for "compact" cookery, so to speak, is co-ordination. Plainly cooked rice — and not minute rice, which takes as much time as regular rice and doesn't taste as good — can be cooked according to package directions while the shrimp is cooking. Guava shells are available in cans. Cooking in less than an hour, which most of the people I know do on a Monday-through-Friday basis — takes only a little foresight.

SHRIMP MARGARITA

Three-quarters pound (about 20) raw shrimp
¼ cup lime juice
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 small, ripe, unblemished avocado
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
¼ cup tequila
Three-quarters cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon finely chopped cilantro or Chinese parsley (see note), optional.

1. Shell and devein the shrimp and "butterfly" them; that is, split them partly down the back and flatten lightly. Place the shrimp in a bowl and add the lime juice, salt and pepper. Let stand briefly until ready to cook.

2. Peel the avocado and cut it into half-inch thick slices. Discard the pit. Use as soon as possible or the flesh will discolor.

3. Heat the butter in a skillet and when it is quite hot but not smoking, add the shrimp, stirring rapidly and cook about two minutes. Sprinkle with the shallots and cook, stirring, about 10 seconds. Add the tequila. Take care, for the tequila may flare up. Add the cream and cook over high heat about one minute. Add salt and pepper to taste. Add the avocado and cook just until the slices are piping hot, no longer. Using a slotted spoon, transfer the shrimp and avocado pieces to hot serving dishes.

Bring the sauce to a full rolling boil for about 30 seconds and add the chopped cilantro. Spoon the sauce over the shrimp and avocado. Serve with rice.

Yield: Four servings.

Note: Cilantro or Chinese parsley is available in markets that specialize in Chinese, Spanish or Mexican greens.

VINAIGRETTE SAUCE WITH HERBS

1 tablespoon imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
½ teaspoon finely chopped garlic
1½ tablespoons red wine vinegar
¼ teaspoon crushed oregano
½ teaspoon ground cumin
4½ tablespoons olive oil.

1. Place the mustard in a bowl and add the salt, pepper, garlic, vinegar, oregano and cumin. Stir well with a wire whisk.

2. Gradually add the oil, stirring rapidly with the whisk. Serve over chilled salad greens.

Yield: About one-third cup.

Bermuda Is Noted For Fish

Associated Press

From the college kids who swarm over the place every spring to staid British couples perched on hotel verandas, people flock to Bermuda the year round to enjoy its charms, one of which is the delicious fish.

A dazzling variety of seafood is the chief attraction in the dining rooms of the luxury hotels, English-style pubs and quaint tea shops of this lush little cluster of islands 570 miles off the North Carolina coast.

There is a dish for every taste, from the famed Bermuda fish chowder laced with sherry, hot peppers and black rum to huge broiled shrimp or refreshing conch salad. For the more adventurous there is a spiced hash made from shark meat.

Bermuda's tourist officials claim the waters off the island group boast more varieties of fish than any area in the world, and they certainly do abound.

The islands are ringed by coral reefs about 10 miles off the north shore and a half-mile off the south. Inside these reefs you can catch gray snapper, yellowtail, grunt, angel fish and small rockfish.

Venture farther out and you will find larger rockfish, red snapper, grouper and amberjack. But if deep-sea fishing is your bag, then you must go beyond the reefs where there is a sudden drop to the ocean floor. There you will find such specimens as tuna, barracuda, mackerel and swordfish.

Those who don't feel like venturing out onto the high seas, but want some fresh-caught fish to cook, can go down to Front Street in Hamilton when the fishing boats are in. A crewman will clean the one you choose and drop it into your basket.

One of the island's most popular fish is snapper, which Bermudians have their own way of preparing. They squeeze lemon or lime juice over the cleaned, raw fish, sprinkle with salt and pepper, then let it stand at room temperature for an hour. The fruit juice tenderizes the fish and shortens cooking time. Here is a recipe for baked red snapper which is popular in Bermuda.

1 four-pound red snapper which can be treated with lemon or lime juice as mentioned above, then dredged inside and out with seasoned flour
8 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped cucumber
1 cup chopped onion
2 cups chopped celery
one third cup chopped green pepper from which seeds have been removed ½ cup dry white wine
3 cups canned tomatoes
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 bay leaf
1 minced clove of garlic
pinch of red pepper

Melt butter, then add it to all ingredients except the fish and simmer 20 minutes. Place fish in baking pan and cover with sauce. Bake in 350-degree oven about 45 minutes. Serve with a chilled dry white wine, preferably one like that used in the sauce. Serves 4.

HOW TO FOIL BAKED POTATO

OTTAWA (CP) — Potatoes should not be baked in foil wrapping, say the home economists at Agriculture Canada.

The foil holds the moisture in and so cooks by steaming rather than baking, resulting in a soggy interior, they say. If you wish to serve the potato in foil, wrap it only partially.

Leave the top open and prick the potato to allow some steam to escape.

After baking, make crosswise or diagonal slits in the top of the potato and pinch to allow steam to escape.

Toppings that add flavor and versatility to baked potatoes are two tablespoons of dairy sour cream or yogurt mixed with one tablespoon green onion or chives, French dressing, processed cheese spread or butter sprinkled with paprika or dill seed.

HEALTHY HABITS PROGRAM'S GOAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver health department is undertaking a large scale program to help people get rid of dangerous lifestyles.

Smoking, drinking, overeating, underexercising, psychological stress and behaviors predisposing to accidents are the targets of the healthful life-style project, headed by Dr. Fred Bass, a city medical health officer.

Dr. Bass said in an interview this week the department has begun with four small lifestyle change programs, two for smokers, one for problem drinkers and one for people with nutrition and exercise problems.

"These are very small pilot programs so far. On the basis of evaluation of the programs, we will begin to expand them, but it will be years before we can serve the whole area," he said.

"We're starting small, so that we'll only make small mistakes."

He said that the health department, with its legion of public health nurses is particularly well equipped to carry out the community level assessment and followup parts of the program.

"Assessment is not only within our authority, but it is something we should be doing."

Business Stages Mexican Strike

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Businessmen and industrialists defied a presidential call for national unity today and joined landowners in a country-wide strike to protest the president's land redistribution program.

The strike, at the height of the worst economic crisis in Mexico in decades, was against land expropriations by President Luis Echeverria in northwest Mexico and what the Chamber of Mining Industries called his "search for a socialist or communist system."

The peso moved up sharply against the U.S. dollar in dealing Tuesday, making up ground lost in a wave of panic selling last week following the Central Bank's freeze on official trading.

At the opening today, banks in Mexico City were buying U.S. dollars for 23 pesos and selling them for 25 pesos.

Until a fixed parity of 12.50 to the U.S. dollar was abandoned Aug. 31, the peso had not changed value for 22 years. Since then it has lost almost 50 per cent of its value against the dollar.

Today;s strike is a result of the government's decision last week to seize more then 243,000 acres of land and convert it into small farms for 8,000 landless peasant families.

Finances, Not Quebec, Blamed for $ Decline

MONTREAL (CP) — The weakness of the Canadian economy, not the Parti Quebecois victory in Quebec, is the main reason for the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar in terms of U.S. funds, a McGill University economist said Tuesday.

"Forecasts about economic recovery have been falsified by events," economist Jack Weldon said in an interview. "The world is still underestimating the general malaise of the Canadian economy."

change rate for the Canadian

Since last Monday the exchange rate for the Canadian dollar, relative to the U.S. dollar, has slipped more than one cent from $1.0231, to $1.0089 at the close of trade Monday.

Weldon said that the prospect of an economic recovery this year was "an act of self-deceit by the press," adding that the economic recovery never got off the ground.

He said that he is pessimistic about the future of the Canadian economy and is beginning to feel that "rational policy is outside the range of our control."

The Parti Quebecois victory in last Monday's Quebec election was not the chief cause of the drop in the value of the dollar, he said.

Rather, he blamed the "intrinsic weakness of the Canadian economy" following what he called "seven years of perverseness in economic policy" and "pre-doomed battles with imported inflation."

Weldon speculated that the Trudeau government was becoming desperate and would abandon its wage and price control policy for an expansionary policy.

Emery Grosland, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada's foreign exchange market, said the drop in the value of the dollar has been expected for some time because of Canada's heavy balance of payments deficit.

He said the results of the Quebec election started the decline, but the basics for it were there all along.

Another possible influence on the exchange rate is the lowering of the prime lending rates last week.

The U.S. Federal Reserve Bank lowered its rate by one-quarter percentage point to 5¼ per cent, from 5½ per cent, while the reduction by the Bank of Canada was one-half of one per cent from 9½ per cent to nine per cent.

Charlotte Ferry This Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — Passenger service by water from the Queen Charlotte Islands to the mainland will resume this week with the chartering of the ferry Malibu Princess by Rivtow Straits Ltd.

The service has two round trips per week scheduled from Masset to Prince Rupert. She will replace Northland Navigation Co.'s passenger service, which was stopped when their federal subsidy was cancelled by Transport Minister Otto Lang.

Designed to carry 250 day passengers, the Malibu Princess will be funded through a joint provincial and federal subsidy, which will compensate for the annual operating losses.

The 126-foot ferry, built in 1968, has previously been used by Trident Yacht Charters Ltd. on a charter basis.

John Cosulich, sales manager for Rivtow Straits, says the exact fares and schedules for the service have not been worked out. But, he said, he expects them within a few days.

Skin Irritated

NEW YORK (AP) — The British Medical Joural says hard water, containing calcium compounds, may cause hands to become dry and sore. Because more soap must be used with hard water to get a lather, this can be a further source of irritation. To counteract these effects, the Journal recommends installing a water-softening system which removes calcium.

More Vitamins

Organ meats such as heart, liver and kidneys, are richer in vitamins and minerals than the muscle meats.

Syrians Move Into South, Near Border with Israel

BEIRUT (UPI) — The Syrian-dominated Arab peacekeeping forces have decided to send a small force to the southern port of Tyre near Israel, military sources said today.

They said a token force of "about 50 men" would go from Sidon south to Tyre, only 18 miles from Israel, and take over the port area of the city, probably sometime this week.

Israel has warned against a new Arab advance and has reinforced its troops along the border.

However, the rightist newspaper Al Anwar quoted Arab political sources as saying the Arab army would make no advances south of its positions near Sidon "until a pan-Arab decision has been made."

The leftist newspaper As Safir reacted angrily to Israeli warnings againt the entry of Arab troops to the southern border region and reinforcements of Israeli troops along the frontier.

"Israel has come out in the open in an attempt to sabotage the return to normal life in Lebanon," the newspaper said.

The United States appears to have taken an active role as a conduit between Syria and Israel on the delicate south Lebanon issue.

U.S. charge d'affaires George Lane was reportedly seeking a meeting with President Elias Sorkis to discuss the southern border. American diplomatic channels, already used to relay Israeli warnings to Damascus, were believed to have been brought into the effort to reduce tension in the area.

Meanwhile, Syrian troops of the 30,000-man Arab army were consolidating their positions further north, advancing into "unpacified" mountain areas of the south-central Chouf district.

Beirut newspapers also said Israeli-supported Christian rightist forces shelled the Palestinian-leftist town of Bint Jbeil Tuesday, killing two persons and wounding four.

The newspapers said Israeli vessels approached Tyre Tuesday but returned south after the leftist Lebanese Arab army opened fire from shore batteries.

TUNNEL KEEPS TOADS OFF BUSY HIGHWAY

MUNICH (AP) — The Bavarian ecology minister reported Monday completion of a tunnel to help toads near the town of Forchheim safely reach their spawning sites on the other side of a highway.

A statement said that in previous years thousands of toads crossed the busy highway to reach a nearby pond and many were killed by passing motoroist.

Two similar tunnels are under construction under highways near Bad Toelz in Upper Bavaria, the statement said, and another will be built between Marnau and Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

Soviet Genetics 'Dictator' Dead

MOSCOW — Soviet biologist Trofim Lysenko, the "Dictator of Soviet genetics" and one of the most controversial scientists of this century, had died at the age of 78. Lysenko's death Saturday was not disclosed until Tuesday and drew only passing mention in the Sovet press despite the indelible mark he left on Soviet genetics, agriculture and scientific research.

A dogmatic Marxist, Lysenko rose spectacularly during the rule of the late dictator Josef Stalin by propounding an unorthodox theory of heredity that has since been discredited as quackery. Lysenko also managed to accrue tremendous influence, and with Stalin's apparent blessing, waged a ruthless campaign to discredit those scientists who opposed him.

Contemporary historians believe Lysenko was responsible for sending scores of biologists to disgrace, prison and in some cases death for arguing the orthodox theories of genetics. In essence, Lysenko argued that hereditary characteristics could be changed by the environment, in direct opposition to the classical view that heredity was transmitted through genes.

During Lysenko's heyday under Stalin, the study of classical genetics vertually disappeared except in underground laboratories. He was blamed for having set back Soviet agriculture for a generation.

DIAMOND

LOS ANGELES — Neil Diamond must complete a six-month drug-diversion program before a judge decides whether to make the singer stand trial on a misdemeanor marijuana possession charge. Sheriff's deputies said they found one ounce of marijuana at Diamond's Bel Air home last June 30 after receiving an anonymous tip. Diamond pleaded not guilty.

OTTAWA — One of Canada's most respected fighting flyers—Group Captain Robert Tremayne Davidson— died in hospital following a lengthy illness Monday. He was 59. Known by the initials RTP through the Second World War and the Korean conflict, he earned the Distinguished Flying Cross and Distinguished Service Cross from Canada, the Croix de Guerre from France and the U.S. Air Medal. Davidson was with the RAF before the Second World War and served in Crete and Egypt. Later he was in Ceylon and still later, flying Typhoon fighter-bombers out of England he was shot down over Normandy and worked with the French underground from May, 1944, until the end of the war.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis was arrested and charged with drunkenness early Tuesday at the entrance to Elvis Presley's mansion. Police said they were called to the Presley home by a security guard who told them Lewis drove up to the gate, screamed and cursed and waved a pistol at him.

It was the second arrest in less than 24 hours for the former rock 'n' roll star who has lately turned to country music. He was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated, reckless driving and failing to carry a driver's licence Monday after another car overturned in a ditch at Collierville near his home.

NEW YORK — An eight-month-old New Mexico boy will spend the next few months in a plastic bubble here, undergoing a transplant operation to give him the defence system that nature did not provide. Demetrius Varvarigos was flown here Tuesday from Albuquerque and taken to Sloam-Kettering Cancer Institute. He will live in a crib-like shell supplied with sterile air to isolate him from the ordinary germs that have filled his life with staph, strep and ear infections. He also will be treated with antibiotics. Dr. Shirley Murphy, pediatric immunologist at the University of New Mexico School of Medicine, said Demetrius was born without an immune-defence system. She said only luck, his mother's care and an alert family pediatrician brought him this far.

THREATS DOG PATTY

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst had barely entered the Mark Hopkins Hotel when the bomb threats began.

They continued long after the newspaper heiress, free on $1.5 million bail while awaiting appeal on her bank robbery conviction, was escorted back to her family's nearby Nobb Hill apartment.

Her brief visit to the famed Top of the Mark cocktail lounge for an after dinner drink was criticized Tuesday by the man who prosecuted her, U.S. attorney James Browning.

Browning, who vigorously opposed Miss Hearst's release, said if the young woman wanted anonymity while free, her private security force should "keep her out of such places."

Phone calls to the hotel began Monday night at 10:35 p.m., just after Miss Hearst arrived, and continued until 8:45 a.m. Tuesday. All of the calls apparently were placed by the same "gruff-voiced" man who kept saying: "We are the SLA."

Hotel switchboard operator Elsa Maldonado said the caller mentioned the address of the Hearst family and said:

"We're going to get Patty Hearst and we're going to start with you. We're the SLA."

Not Even a Rug Was Left Behind

WASHINGTON — Shortly after the election, Sen. Walter Mondale decided to look at what will be hs new home, Admiral's House, the official residence of the vice president.

How did he like that snazzy Rockefeller bed, the one Max Ernst made for $35,000 and called "Apparatus for Dreaming?" "It wasn't there," Mondale told a reporter.

"It was gone," the vice president-to-be said. "Everything was gone." Mondale said that when he drove up to the pillard porte-cochere and opened the door to his new house, discovered:

Every one of the 48 paintings hung on the wall by Nelson Rockefeller had vanished, the dining table was gone, the oriental pieces were missing, the sofas had departed, and the chars, both overstuffed and straght-backed had evaporated. There was not even one rug on the floor.

"All that was there," Mondale said, "was a half-dozen Army cots." He said he wasn't about to refurnish the house. "I'll sleep on one of the cots," he said.

A spokesman for the Navy, which is in charge of Admiral's House, insisted that a practical joke was not being played on the vice president-elect. "It is empty because of the work," he said.

The work, he added, is to replace the heating system and install air conditioning.

It is axiomatic that when declarer leads a specific suit at notrump, the defendrs, when they obtain the lead, will shy away from leading that suit. This logic is easily understandable: if the declarer is interested in building up that suit, the defenders are not going to help him by continuing the suit.

As a result of this ingrained defensive approach, a declarer is on occasion able to capitalize on it. Such was the case in today's deal, which arose in a national championship event.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	1 NT
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

South's one notrump overcall showed the exact equivalent of a one-no-trump opening bid: 16-18 points, a balanced hand, and the requisite protection in each of the four suits. While the doubleton J-6 of spades is not what wone could call "requisite protection," South felt that his 18 high-card points more than compensated for his deficiency in the spade suit. On this day, things turned out well.

Upon winning the opening club lead with his queen, South didn't care for his position; if he attacked diamonds, the defenders, upon taking their ace, would almost surely shift to spades, dummy's weak spot. And once they did this, declarer would go down, since the defenders figured to tricks.

So, in an attempt to steer win at least four spades them away from leading spades, at trick two declarer led the jack of spades out of his own hand! The trick was won by East's ace, and a club was returned, South taking his ace.

Next came a low diamond to the board's jack, which East captured with his ace. At this point East probably should have suspected what was going on, based on declarer's failure to have continued developing the spade suit. But East evidently didn't give it any thought, for he next played another club. Declarer now romped home with nine tricks.

It is apparent that if East had led a spade anywhere along the line, the defenders would have made four spade tricks, plus the diamond ace. But declarer's spade lead at trick two led East astray.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"That's odd," said Basil, checking his change as they left the restaurant. "I gave her three bucks."

"You did," Martha agreed. "Something wrong?"

Her husband smiled. "No, not that. I just noticed the amount of the cheque was exactly double the square of my change, all in cents of course."

You figure it out.

Hunter answers all letters: ideas welcomed.

MARTIAL LAW ON HORIZON

ANKARA (Reuter)—The spectre of martial law is haunting Turkish politics in the midst of a government crackdown on left-wing militants, a sudden wave of industrial unrest and continuing student violence.

The government appears to be firmly in control and on the surface martial law seems to be a distant cloud on the horizon.

Nevertheless, Prime Minister Suleyman Demirel has said it might be necessary to impose martial law if the country becomes ungovernable. He said he was confronted with "organized disorder" designed to topple his right-of-centre coalition administration.

Talk of martial law evokes memories here. Twice in the last 16 years the military, traditional guarantor of order in Turkey, has intervened to check what it regarded as cancers developing on the body politic.

The question of martial law was discussed last January during serious student fighting.

The fact that politicians are talking about the possibility of martial law again points to an increase in the already sharp polarization between left and right.

This is illustrated by violence on the university campuses—50 people have been killed and scores more injured in left-right student clashes this year.

Recently, a new factor, labor unrest, emerged, when tens of thousands of extreme left-wing workers staged a six-day strike.

The stoppage, Turkey's worst industrial trouble for six years, paralysed many private firms, municipal bus and garbage services, two major oil refineries and a state-run steel mill.

The spur behind the strike is a controversial government bill that will keep in existence special courts set up in 1973 to try offences against state security.

Their judges, who include military men, are chosen by the government and some opponents have branded the courts as martial law instruments in civilian clothing.

The main opposition Republican People's Party (RPP), led by Bulent Ecevit, is fighting in parliament to halt the legislation.

The government has struck back hard. "We are at war with people who make factories inoperable," Demirel said, and legal proceedings began against hundreds of alleged leaders of the six-day strike.

The strike was organized by the left-wing Federation of Revolutionary Workers' Trade Unions (DISK).

The authorities also are trying to close down the leftist Turkish teachers' association for alleged propaganda activities said to threaten state security.

Spain Sets Date

MADRID (Reuter) — Spain will hold a national referendum on Dec. 15 to approve plans for a two-house parliament elected by universal suffrage, says a government spokesman.

Greeks Rally Behind Leader, Despite Critics

Washington Post

ATHENS — To his frenzied supporters Constantine Karamanlis is a messiah. To his detractors, he is too authoritarian, too conservative for the times. When Greek voters flocked to the polls two years ago — in their first free elections after seven-year dictatorship — they gave Karamanlis an overwhelming vote of confidence to rebuild their shattered country.

The initial Euphoria has subsided and opposition criticism is on the rise, but Karamanlis remains the undisputed leader of this Mediterranean nation. Even the most outspoken critics of the solitary, 69-year-old statesman grant him a grudging respect.

"Karamanlis represents the balance," says Leonidas Kyrkos, parliamentary spokesman of the Communist party of the Interior.

"He is in the center between those forces who want a true renovation of the country, and those who are drawing back. An alternative? The best alternative would be a national unity government with the participation of all parties. The problems facing Greece are tremendous and can be solved only by transcending party lines. Without that, however, there is no alternative for the moment. That's why no party has pushed the slogan 'down with Karamanlis.'"

The main problems are the recurring crisis with Turkey over disputed oil rights in the Aegean, an economy bankrupted by the military regime, and the festering sore of Cyprus. Exhausting the government's time and energy, forcing one-fourth of the budget into national defense, the Cyprus imbroglio has diverted attention from pressing social issues. It has also fostered national unity.

"It's true that the Turkish threat has done more to unify Greece than any issue in the country's history," a Western diplomat said. "But surely Karamanlis would be better off without it."

Without it, however, his one-man rule would be more open to criticism and growing pressures would emerge.

"This is a dictatorship under a parliamentary cloak," charged opposition leader George Mavros. "Our parliament looks like a parliament behind the Iron Curtain. The prime minister appears and makes a speech once a year to the canned applause of his deputies. There is no parliamentary debate. The only difference between here and there is that 300 deputies take all decisions unanimously in the presidium. Here, Karamanlis has only 216.

"He doesn't even solicit advice from his own ministers, let alone the opposition," Mavros continued, "and his administration is very weak. He rules the country himself, through remote control and under secretaries . . . He says that authoritarian leadership is necessary to rule the Greeks. This is nonsense. It's exactly the opposite. You cannot rule a passionate people through force. Karamanlis says he detests passion in politics. But he's the most passionate person I know."

Passionate in his single-minded purpose, like De Gaulle in his vision of Greece, Karamanlis prides himself in being the single politician who most personifies and best understands the Greeks.

Karamanlis is dominant and impressive, energetic for a man of his years. Golf and luncheons in small, seaside taverns are his only diversions. Politics and a position of leadership have become his raison d'etre.

Intent upon combatting what he terms "abuses of democracy," Karamanlis has aroused controversy in every socio-economic class. His personalized philosophy dictates that a portion of personal wealth and certain basic freedoms must be sacrificed to secure democracy.

Taking on the economic establishment, he has slapped new taxation on the upper-income brackets and corporate profits.

He has also gone after the "golden Greeks," warning the powerful multimillionaire ship owners that it is time to curb their swashbuckling ways. He brought three banks belonging to Christina Onassis's father-in-law, Stratis Andreadis, under the control of the government. He has launched far-reaching investigations into the business dealings of Stavros Niarchos, John Latsis, and Tom Pappas for obtaining allegedly preferential contracts under the military regime.

He has also curbed individual freedoms by banning demonstrations and pushing through a labor bill which virtually eliminates strikes. He has disregarded the voice of local governments — all controlled by the opposition — and is re-instituting deportation for political offences.

"Sometimes I want to explode with anger," said socialist Manolis Doukakis. "But he's made a lot of progress, I must admit. I wouldn't give him my vote, but I surely give him my respect."

Karamanlis has rebuilt the shattered armed forces into a top-notch fighting force. His courts have sentenced 11 officials of the fallen junta to life in prison and 71 others to a total of 591 years.

Inflation has been slashed from 31 to 12 per cent, and the once sluggish economy has a projected 1976 growth rate of between 6 and 7 per cent.

Raising the question of whether poorer nations can compete with industrial giants such as West Germany and France, he has thrust his industrially tottering country into negotiations for membership in the European Common Market. Membership would be the realization of his long-time European dream.

Loyally pro-Western and an avowed admirer of the United States, the wily prime minister has also embarked on an ister has aso embarked on an effort to stunt the country's anti-Americanism. He is hoping, according to a close adviser, that President-elect Jimmy Carter will somehow reciprocate.

Help Short as Building Booms

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's construction industry has been having a boom year and prospects for 1977 are bright— that is, if there are enough skilled tradesmen around to get the work done.

The industry has had one of its healthiest periods ever but is concerned about higher wages paid in Alberta and the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Centres throughout southern Saskatchewan report building figures are well ahead of last year and setting records in many communities. Regina's building permits to the end of August hit a value of more than $104 million, compared with $83.5 million for the same period last year, when the year's total was $152.1.

Yorkton is up more than $10 million in the value of permits issued to September, and Weyburn's first nine months have set a record for a single year's construction at $8.2 million. The first nine months of 1975 in Weyburn produced $3.5 million.

Both Moose Jaw and Estevan are also up but Swift Current has fallen behind last year's pace of $10.4 million for the first nine months with this year's total of $8.4 million.

Contributing to Saskatchewan's healthy economy is the emergence of Regina as a manufacturing and distribution centre, said Jack Walker of the city's development department.

"Winnipeg used to be considered the key distribution centre for the Prairies but now Regina is attaining that recognition," Mr. Walker said.

He agrees with Colby Burns of Regina's engineering department that 1977 will also be a strong construction year.

Mr. Burns said the construction appears to be split between industrial and commercial development and residential housing. Currently, the commercial, industrial and institutional sectors have the edge, following heavier house construction in the spring.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. figures show house construction in Southern Saskatchewan to the end of August this year totalled more than 3,000 starts, compared with some 2,600 last year, a 40-per-cent increase.

For the last two years Saskatchewan has been drawing tradesmen from Eastern Canada and they are still at a premium in the province, said Graham Smilie, secretary-manager of the Regina Construction Association.

"The industry is more concerned with production," he said. "We can get people, but getting people who know what they are doing is another thing."

"There is a lot of movement in the industry," said Jim Chase, president of the Saskatchewan Construction Labor Relations Council. "It is pretty hard to say how many trades people we are short but in Alberta they are short about 4,000."

The council, he said, is concerned about the wage difference between Alberta and Saskatchewan, especially after an anti-inflation board ruling put Saskatchewan workers around a dollar an hour behind workers in Alberta.

Historic Church Rebuilt

SITKA, Alaska (AP) — Shafts of sunlight broke through the mist, illuminating swirling clouds of incense as the first Russian Orthodox cathedral in North America was reconsecrated.

To many of the 300 members of St. Michael's Cathedral, it seemed like a miracle.

The church had been destroyed by fire on Jan. 2, 1966, when flames swept the business district of this southeast Alaska community.

Members of the congregation had risked their lives to save most of the glittering icons and other relics of czarist Russia which decorated the cathedral.

But strong winds, inadequate firefighting equipment and bitter cold contributed to the destruction of the building, then 118 years old and a national historic site.

The congregation of 300, many of them Indians whose ancestors had been converted to Christianity, decided to rebuild, but first they had to get money. So far they've raised $600,000.

"It was like something was missing from the lives of the people," said Bishop Gregory of Sitka and all Alaska.

The new building is a near-replica of the original, which was built in 1848 by the "apostle of Alaska," Bishop Innocent. The clock he built himself is missing, however, and there's another change: the reconstruction materials are fire resistant.

But the icons are back, including the famous Sitka Madonna, painted by Vladimir Borovikovsky for Catherine the Great and claimed to have miraculous powers.

Russian-born architect Sergey Padukow worked from documents prepared by the National Park Service when the building was designated a historic site.

The 97-by-68 foot cathedral was crowded Sunday as Bishop Theodosius of Pittsburgh and West Virginia presided over the consecration ceremony. He had served in Alaska from 1967 to 1971.

"I wouldn't have missed it," he said after the 4½-hour service.

Parishioners, well-wishers and church officials—including Archbishop Francis Hurley of the Anchorage Catholic diocese—came to Sitka from points throughout Alaska and the continental U.S.

"It's a miracle of the 20th century," said Bishop Gregory, born in Kiev, U.S.S.R. "Not only for Alaska, and not only for the Orthodox church. The donations for rebuilding came as $5, $10, whatever people could spare."

JURY RULES THEFT

An 18-year-old Fairfield man was convicted by a county court jury Tuesday of theft from a 48-year-old man in Beacon Hill Park April 22.

David Edward Wilson, 1418 Brooke, had been accused of robbery with violence against Allan Parliament but the jury returned the lesser verdict of theft after deliberating 55 minutes.

Judge Peter Millward had outlined four possible verdicts for the jury — guilty of robbery with violence, guilty of theft, guilty of assault or not guilty — and the jury returned once to the courtroom to listen again to his remarks on alternative verdicts.

Wilson will be sentenced in the latter part of January when Judge Millward returns to Victoria and a pre-sentence report is available. Until then, Wilson is free but must report once a week to a bail supervisor.

Before The Judge

Two 19-year-old Victoria men were sentenced in provincial court Tuesday to six months in prison for theft of about a dozen cases of beer from the London Fish and Chips restaurant on Pandora on Oct. 13.

Carl R. Banforth, 1645 Richardson, and John Barrett, 92 Wellington, had pleaded guilty to charges of breaking, entering and theft and were found guilty Monday.

Both had previous criminal records.

A suspended sentence and 60 hours of community work were ordered for an elderly man.

Joseph Bruce Downing, a pensioner living at 435 Superior, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft involving a box with $17.40 worth of change taken from the Army, Navy, Air Force Club on Wharf Street on Nov. 11.

Court was told Downing took the box, containing a coffee fund, and left the premises. He was called back and returned the box a short time later.

Allan told the accused man the only reason he suspended sentence was because "you live on a pension."

He also told Downing he would find the community work rewarding.

A 17-year-old student was reprimanded by Judge Blake Allan for stealing a sweater from The Bay.

Marilyn Gail Smith, of 2759 Prior, pleaded guilty and was given a suspended sentence and ordered to do 60 hours of community work.

She was arrested after she entered a change room at The Bay with two new sweaters and emerged a short time later, depositing one new and one used sweater on a counter and then left the store without paying.

"A young woman like you should know better. It is shameful for you to steal and come up in court like this," the judge told her.

Misjudgment Ruled Death Cause

A coroner's jury has ruled a 25-year-old man killed in a traffic mishap Oct. 28 contributed to his own death "through misjudgment and driving without due care and attention."

Donald Gordon Polley was killed instantly on the Malahat opposite the Malahat Bungalows when his small car collided with a loaded 25-ton logging truck.

The six-man jury attached no blame to the truck driver, Louis Reginald Shreenan of Shawnigan Lake, who was not hurt in the collision.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said witnesses presumed Polley was trying to turn off the highway into the driveway of the Malahat Bungalows where he had rented a cabin.

St. Jorre said an analysis showed no presence of alcohol or drugs in Polley's body.

France Maintains East Bloc Accord

By JULIAN NUNDY

PARIS (Reuter) — France appears to be maintaining its special position in Eastern Europe despite some setbacks in its relations with Moscow.

Last month, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing visited Poland for what was billed as a hunting trip, but much of his time was spent on official business.

The visit mystified many observers of the Communist scene.

The French president travelled without the usual retinue of ministers and officials for the meeting with Polish Communist party chief Edward Gierek in Gierek's hunting lodge near the Soviet border.

It is common practice for Soviet bloc leaders to travel to rural haunts on what are officially called holidays which produce wordy communiques on talks held there, but it has never been normal procedure for top-level East-West contacts.

A statement issued after Giscard's return concentrated on East-West detente and bilateral relations, particularly in the economic field.

The 1975 Helsinki conference on European security has caused bitter verbal friction between capitalist and Communist countries over how its accords should be applied.

France was a prime mover on the western side in promoting the Soviet-backed conference, due to be followed by a second meeting in Belgrade early next year to discuss results and future action.

But Giscard apparently offended the Russians a year ago during a visit to Moscow when he called for an end to ideological controversy.

Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev replied that detente could not halt the battle of ideas and postponed one session of talks, officially because he had a cold.

Since then, however, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko has visited Paris and reaffirmed Brezhnev's intention to visit France, probably before the end of this year, and both leaders appeared on each other's television networks this month.

But even this aggravated Franco-Soviet relations.

The Soviet press reprinted criticism by the French Communist daily L'Humanite of Giscard's emphasis on the material benefits of living in France and one Soviet journal painted a gloomy picture of what life was really like for the average Frenchman.

These new frictions, just a few days before the French head of state went to Poland, seem unlikely to have any serious effect on long-term relations.

Giscard's visit went off as planned and he was lavishly praised by the Polish press.

When Giscard went to Poland there were suggestions that Gierek was going to act as Brezhnev's intermediary to sound out western opinion before the Belgrade security conference.

With the close relations that exist between Poland and the Soviet Union, the Kremlin is certain to have been well informed of the visit's results.

At the same time, some diplomats said it appeared to represent a deliberate Polish attempt to cultivate, within limits, special relations with France.

The Poles were also thought to be anxious to step up trade contacts to bolster their economy. Poland suffered its second wave of strikes and demonstrations in less than six years in June because of proposed price increases.

Giscard's next contact with the Communist world, apart from his talks with Brezhnev, is expected to be with Yugoslavia, the only Communist country outside the Soviet and Chinese blocs.

Since Gen. Charles de Gaulle withdrew France from NATO's military command in 1966, France has held a special place in the Soviet bloc's heart.

Giscard has not been an ideal French president from the Soviet point of view. He has shown more warmth toward the Atlantic Alliance and has been more critical of the Kremlin than either de Gaulle or his successor, George Pompidou.

Nevertheless, with few other countries seeking special relations with Eastern Europe after two years of disappointment with the result of detente, Russia is unlikely to discourage its communist allies from giving France a priviledged position.

Shelepin Replaced

MOSCOW (AP) — A new head of the Soviet trade union system has been appointed, filling a post left vacant by the ouster of Alexander Shelepin. The Central Board of Trade Unions elected as its chairman Alexei Shibayev, 61.

Burn Black-Spot Rose Leaves

Roses in the Greater Victoria area retain leaves in good condition throughout November, but the plants may safely be moved if this is necessary. And new plants bought from the nursery should be put in as soon as received.

When black-spot has been noticed on the leaves during the year, all fallen leaves should be gathered and burned. Try to rake up every one, for the disease is fungous in nature and spreads by spores.

Climbing roses will benefit in spring by having all dead wood cut out now; the new growth of spring will then have clear space instead of becoming tangled with worn-out branches. This is not pruning, in the sense of cutting back living growth. No true pruning is done on roses in fall. Wait until late March and early April.

After cleaning out the climbers; tie back and fasten securely all the green canes which are expected to bloom next year. Space them on the support so that a good display is achieved.

A top dressing of well-rotted old manure or soil from an old compost heap will not only protect the root area but will release minerals during winter for use in spring by the roots.

Particularly is this surface mulching needed when climbers have been planted near house walls, fences, or retaining walls where soil is somewhat restricted in area and soon becomes depleted.

Dwarfer kinds of rose, hybrid teas, floribundas and others, growing in more open beds, need the same top dressing after cleaning-up.

If your area is colder as in some parts of Saanich and in open spots of Colwood and Langford an extra, loose covering of bracken on top of the manure or soil will be valuable in breaking up frost formation. In a real hard frost, bracken around the lower stems of roses will save a few growth buds for the next year's crop of flowers.

Roses in sheltered gardens will have a few flowers open each week. If on new plants it is advisable not to let them fully develop and drain energy. Cut the flower stems as color is seen, shorten and split for an inch at the base and put into a low bowl of water on a table. Surround with a few dark green leaves of laurel or ivy. If fragrant, so much the better.

Don't under-estimate the value of a rose or two unfolding its delicately perfumed petals for visitors coming around during the holidays.

As the winter season begins next month, roses may still be holding leaves and a few flowers. Gardeners, particularly new ones to the area, get a bit frantic about this. They want to prune to stop the plants growing any more.

One important point is not to prune until spring. Pruning encourages growth. And if pruning is done too early the new growth which follows is easily killed by hard frost in January or February.

There will then be no dormant growth buds in reserve for later spring growth and subsequent flowers.

Don't do any pruning now. Take your roses as they come; enjoy the strays in winter as a bonus on the summer display.

Horticulturist Dies

Sam Arrowsmith, who grew and developed some of the finest ornamental plants in Canada at the federal research station, Saanichton, died in Victoria Tuesday.

He was 59 years old.

He retired as farm foreman in August of this year, following 37 years service with the research station, formerly known as the Dominion Experimental Farm.

But he was much more than a farm foreman. He was internationally known as a leading authority on ornamentals and hybridizer.

He and horticulturist Jack Crossley developed some of the world's finest begonias and fuchsias. The plants attracted visitors and experts from Europe and the United States.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Chuang Funeral Friday

Funeral services will be held at McCall Floral Chapel Friday at 3:30 p.m. for Dr. Ching-Chang Chuang, a provincial museum botanist, who died here Monday. He was 44.

He was co-author with J. E. (Ted) Underhill, a provincial parks official, of the book Wildflowers of Manning Park, published this summer.

Born in Taipei, Taiwan, in 1931, he became an authority on the pea family and mosses in that country.

He received his master of science degree from the National Taiwan University in 1963 before emigrating to Canada in 1967 to continue studies which culminated in a Ph.D in botany from the University of British Columbia.

Since 1971, he was active in research on plants of Yoho National Park and Mount Robson Provincial Park.

He is survived by his widow Chu-Mei (May) and two sons at home and his mother in Taiwan.

CIA HEAD RESIGNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush announced today he is resigning as director of the Central Intelligence Agency effective inauguration day.

Bush's announcement was issued by a CIA spokesman. The announcement said Bush "would not remain as director after Jan. 20, 1977."

It said Bush "pledged his continuing full assistance" to president-elect Jimmy Carter during the transition between administrations.

"Mr. Bush informed President Ford and president-elect Carter of his decision," the announcement said.

It gave no indication of Bush's future plans.

Bush briefed Carter for nearly six hours last Friday at the president-elect's home in Plains, Ga., on the highly secret methods the CIA uses to gather intelligence around the world.

Bush told reporters in Plains that he had visited Ford before flying to Georgia and was told to give Carter full access to any information he might desire.

Chinese Army Marches In To Curb Hua Resistance

Washington Post

HONG KONG — New Communist party chairman Hua Kuo-feng has ordered army units to take over local adminstration of a strategic, faction-ridden Chinese province, the first such reported military intervention in China in more than a year.

The order to dispatch army work teams throughout Fukien province, reported in an official radio broadcast monitored here, is a virtual declaration of martial law. It came as Peking issued a nationwide call for obedience to central authority that indicates lingering resistance to Hua's new administration.

"Complying with the instructions of the party central committee headed by Chairman Hua, and carring forward our army's glorious tradition of supporting the government and cherishing the people," the Fukien broadcast said, "the party committee of the People's Liberation Army units on the Fukien front has organized large numbers of commanders and fighters into propaganda and mass work teams and dispatched them to various cities, rural villages, factories, mines, government offices, schools and neighborhoods of our province to vigorously support local work and enthusiastically propagate the instructions of the party central committee."

Historically, work teams have been dispatched in China only when regular party authorities have violated instructions or proved incapable of controlling local strife. The action in Fukien, a politically volatile coastal province directly across from the Nationalist Chinese island of Taiwan, is the first known military intervention since troops were sent to quell labor unrest in the capital of neighboring Chekiang province in the summer of 1975.

Purged Radical Blamed for Strife

PEKING (Reuter) — Wang Hung-wen, the Shanghai radical once considered a likely successor to Chairman Mao Tse-tung, was accused today by the official Chinese media of causing political strife in the south-eastern city of Hangchow.

Hangchow, a lakeside resort, was the scene last year of factional violence which was finally put down by the army. It was rumored that at one point Wang tried to settle the dispute but failed.

A commentary in the People's Daily acussed Wang, who has been purged along with three other top radicals, of engaging in the factionalism.

It said he hoped that by disrupting factories there, it would "put a noose" around the necks of provincial administrators opposing the radicals.

Another article in the People's Daily accused Wang of being a spendthrift, saying that in a three-month period in Shaghai last year he spent more than the ordinary worker earns in 30 years.

The same aricle accused two other purged radicals — former Shaghai mayor Chang Chun-chiao and idealogue Yao Wen-yuan — of trying to "knock down" senior officials in Shanghai.

The newspaper also attacked Mao's widow, Chiang Ching. It quoted her as saying: " 'When ever I see workers it gives me a headache..' "

Free Trade Zones Prosper On U.S. Side of Border

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — A free-trade zone often conjures up pictures of exotic foreign ports of call, but one recently opened in this prosaic Lake Erie city, the 19th to start operating in the United States.

Four other zones are close to the Canadian border, at Sault Ste. Marie and Bay City, Mich., Seattle, Wash., and Toledo, Ohio.

The emphasis in the zones is generally on commercial rather than manufacturing activity.

The Buffalo Foreign-Trade Zone Operators Inc. zone is on an area of 18 acres, which George Keitner, executive vice-president, said he hopes to turn into a mini-industrial park.

He said his original plans for a zone in Canada had been well received by Canadian businessmen but not with much enthusiasm from the government.

Two Canadian companies are using the Buffalo zone he set up instead. "Free-trade zones are one of the tools of international trade and I'll keep working at getting one in Canada."

Canada has never had one as far as the customs and excise branch of Revenue Canada can determine. And although the federal government has tried to offer similar benefits through customs and tariff regulations, the merits of zones are still debated from time to time.

The Quebec government has talked of a zone adjacent to Montreal's Mirabel airport. Changes in customs and tariff laws would be required.

Goods and materials can be imported duty- and tariff-free into such zones to be stored or used in the manufacture of other products. Only if the material or products subsequently enter the domestic market are they liable for taxes. Usually they are exported.

The zones can take a number of forms. They can be small areas such as the highly-successful zone next to Shannon airport in the Republic of Ireland.

Alternatively, the area can be a completely free port such as Hong Kong. A third form is a transit zone that, for example, is negotiated between a landlocked country and its seaboard neighbor.

The fourth variety is a free perimeter zone designed to stimulate trade off the beaten track. Parts of the Amazon basin are designated as such zones.

Stanley Mizgala, chief economist of the customs and excise branch of Revenue Canada, said the advantages of the zones are freedom from duties, bonds and other customs expenses, reduced transportation costs and wider choices of destinations for goods.

Importers also find them convenient for storing goods pending the start of a new import quota period, for breaking bulk shipments and repackaging, or testing the goods for quality and avoiding the tariffs on any returned to the manufacturer.

The problems with zones arise when materials or products enter the domestic market and customs officers have to determine the tariff. Should the goods be considered as domestically produced? If they are of foreign origin what are the countries of origin and therefore what tariff on each part of the product? What is the value added in the host country? How do dumping laws and import and export controls apply?

The more intricate a country's trading patterns, the more complicated the questions.

"Customs officers in all industrialized countries abhor free zones because of the problems they create," Mr. Mizgala said.

He said Shannon largely avoids the problem by making it so hard for goods to enter the domestic market that few do.

A number of zones have been proposed for Canada over the years, including Halifax, Churchill, Man., and areas of the Niagara Peninsula.

Governments have responded by adapting tariffs and customs procedures to offer similar benefits rather than accepting free zones.

The main mechanism is duty drawbacks, which refund 99 per cent of tariffs on imported goods if they are re-exported. Alternatively, goods can be placed in bonded warehouses and tariffs are paid only when the goods are removed to the domestic market.

One disadvantage of the warehouses is the importer is restricted by rules as to what he can do with the goods while they are in bond. He cannot, for example, use them to make another product.

But Peter Dawes, director of foreign trade for the Canadian Importers Association, said drawbacks involve a great deal of red tape. He would like free zones to be looked at seriously.

Mr. Dawes said they have worked around the world because they are a terrific incentive to trade and foreign investment.

WORLD BANKS FIGHT TO BALANCE BOOKS

WASHINGTON (CP) — Three decades after their establishment, major international financial organizations are still waging an uphill battle to realize their goals.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) is far from achieving a stable monetary system and the World Bank reports little progress in developing the economies of impoverished countries.

But groups within the two related organizations have not given up on their ambitious goals. They are pushing for changes that would involve greatly increased financial commitments by industrialized states and acceptance of external constraints on a country's financial policies.

At the World Bank, president Robert McNamara has called for huge increases in the bank's capital to permit $8 billion a year in loans rather than the $5.8-billion limit imposed at the initiative of the United States.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon has expressed concern at creation of new credit, estimating that even with the current limit the bank's outstanding loans will total $40 billion by 1985, compared with the current $14 billion.

If the monetary stakes are high, so are the human ones.

In an October speech, McNamara graphically described the failure of the developed countries to help their poorest neighbors:

"The per-capita incomes of the more than one billion human beings in the poorest countries have nearly stagnated over the last decade.

"In statistical terms they have risen only about $20 a year, from $130 in 1965 to $150 in 1975.

"But what is beyond the power of any set of statistics to illustrate is the inhuman degradation the vast majority of these individuals are condemned to because of poverty.

"Malnutrition saps their energy, stunts their bodies and shortens their lives. Illiteracy darkens their minds and forecloses their futures.

"Simple, preventable diseases maim and kill their children. Squalor and ugliness pollute and poison their surroundings."

Although asserting that the governments of the poorest countries have to do better in helping their own people instead of enriching elites, McNamara noted that the developed countries are far from the target of allocating seven-tenths of one per cent of their gross national product to official development aid.

The developed countries agreed to that target in 1970, but their aid last year was only half the goal and the proportion is expected to fall slightly by 1980, he said.

Another indication of stagnation in development aid came in the bank's annual report, which showed that after allowance for inflation the prime mechanism for aid to the poorest countries lent less in 1976 than 1975.

The World Bank is composed of three institutions: the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, whose loans are made only on economic considerations; the International Development Association (IDA), which provides loans on easy terms for the poorest countries, and the International Finance Corp., which provides risk capital for private enterprise in developing countries.

The annual report said IDA lending declined by one per cent when measured in constant dollars.

The developed countries, however, are having their own troubles on the international monetary scene.

Industrial countries such as Britain and Italy have had to draw heavily on the IMF for help with balance-of-payments problems. Because of sharp increases in oil prices and other factors, their monetary outflow greatly exceeds inflow, a situation that creates inflationary pressures and pressures for currency devaluation.

Oil prices have also had their effect on developing countries, prompting the IMF to put revenues from gold sales into a trust fund that will help offset the payments deficits of the developing states.

While implementing such special arrangements, the IMF is also working for more comprehensive arrangements to promote a stable monetary system.

In effect, the IMF is just now recovering from a series of shocks that erased much previous progress.

After having a gold-based system of fixed currency exchange rates for 25 years, the monetary system was overturned in 1970 when the U.S. government ended the dollar's convertibility into gold.

Other shocks followed as major currencies were put on floating exchange rates, a move designed to allow adjustments for continuing balance-of-payments deficits or surpluses.

Supporters of floating rates argued that countries with surpluses would see their currencies appreciate, raising the cost to other countries of their exports. Imbalances would tend to correct themselves.

Monetary officials now are trying to implement guidelines that would require countries to act responsibly in influencing exchange rates.

The guidelines, which must be ratified by a majority of IMF members before becoming binding on all, were designed to prevent such problems as a country keeping its currency at an artificially low exchange rate to increase exports.

In addition, countries would be expected to take all practical measures to avoid high inflation and continuing balance-of-payments imbalances, conditions which strain monetary relationships.

But even when the guides become binding, IMF officials will have a difficult task enforcing them in the face of jealously guarded national sovereignty.

Community Plan Review

Community groups in Saanich soon will be contacted and dates set for them to review the objectives of the municipality's community plan.

These were approved at a special council meeting on Tuesday.

The council agreed with parks and recreation committee chairman Ald. Fred Severson that over-all needs for parks and recreation facilities in the regional district should be assessed on a regional basis and paid for through a per capita system.

It is expected to be 18 months before Saanich's community plan is completed.

PHONE FAKERS WARNING MADE

Householders should demand to see an identification card before allowing anyone into their home to do phone work.

This warning was issued Tuesday by B.C. Tel after the company received reports of a man and woman entering homes in Oak Bay and Colquitz by posing as company employees making a survey on quality of service and then asking to inspect the equipment.

The identification cards carried by legitimate employees bear a photograph and employee number that can be checked with the company.

B.C. Tel has also asked that customers call the police or the company switchboard if approached by a suspicious person.

O.K. Rub Parlor, Duncan Advised

DUNCAN — City council has been told by its solicitor it must issue a business licence to the owners of a proposed body rub parlor opening here in about three weeks.

Refusing a licence to the Garden of Eden Leisure Club would expose the city to a damage suit under the present law, which is being appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada by the city of Prince George, Hugh Henderson of Victoria advised council.

William Street, solicitor for the Vancouver-based club, attempted Monday to allay the fears of council, saying the club is not connected with those operations in Vancouver which have caused "grave concern."

"My clients' operations are a new dimension in spas and you are welcome to our Vancouver operation to see for yourself," Street said.

"We are just as concerned about some of these operations, which are resulting in a bad name for facilities like the one proposed here," he added.

Mayor Ken Paskin warned that council will take action against the club if it is not in keeping with the community.

MR. CITIZENSHIP to more than 10,000 new Canadians, Herbert Milne says farewell to Josie Dzugalo, his assistant, in Victoria citizenship court.

Mr. Citizenship Has His Last Day in Court

Herbert Milnes — Mr. Citizenship to thousands of new Canadians — retired Tuesday, ending more than 12 years as an officer in both Victoria and Vancouver citizenship courts.

His parting might have gone largely unnoticed by the general public had not Judge Norman Oreck recently praised Milnes for the "gentle dignity" he has given what some people call Canada's happiest court.

For quiet, soft-spoken Milnes, the moment was the culmination of six years as clerk of the court here and another six as examiner with the court in Vancouver.

During his time in Victoria he has helped more than 10,000 persons become Canadian citizens.

"It's been a happy job," says Milnes, "like arranging a marriage in a lot of instances. Becoming a citizen is a big moment for these people because many came to Canada as refugees with no place to belong to."

His task was to process applications and advise persons on what to expect at the examination session with the judge and subsequent ceremony. He informed applicants of their rights, privileges and responsibilities in becoming citizens, a topic later expanded on by the presiding judge.

"Nearly everyone seems to know their rights and privileges," he says, "but not always their responsibilities."

Milnes says his greatest problems were not with immigrants struggling with the language but rather "old time citizens" — persons born in Canada but who have lost documents to prove it.

"They'll come in and demand a citizenship card and some get pretty hot if we don't give them one right away."

Milnes' assistant, Josie Dzugalo, is also leaving next month and the two are being replaced by Phyllis Dale and Joseph Sharples.

Born 65 years ago in Wales, Milnes came to Canada as an infant and settled in Brandon, Man.

He came to B.C. in the 30's and worked 20 years at Britannia Beach as an accountant, leaving when the mine closed down in 1958.

He joined the federal board of grain commissioners in 1960 and four years later started with the citizenship court.

In retirement, he says, he and his wife have no plans other than puttering around the garden at their home at 1820 Richardson.

"One thing I will be doing," he says, "is throwing out the alarm clock."

Insults Slow S.W. Africa Talks

Washington Post

WINDHOEK, Namibia — South Africa's 15-month-old attempt to install a friendly multiracial government in this disputed neighboring territory appears to be stumbling into a staemate because of the continuing application of apartheid policies here.

Conservative leaders of African and mixed-ancestry delegations participating in constitutional talks here have been stung by new displays of discrimination by a white community that theoretically is negotiating a far-reaching sharing of power with them. Local support appears to be melting away as a result of the fresh racial insults.

Some of these leaders say they will warn South African Prime Minister John Vorster this week that the constitutional conference could become a pointless exercise unless he agrees to let them form an interim government immediately and to lift apartheid measures here.

This appeal will pose a major dilemma for Vorster, who has refused to make the kind of changes in his own country that the delegates will be asking him to approve for the territory that South Africa rules in defiance of the United Nations.

Collapse of the constitutional conference would seriously undermine the interrelated international moves to resolve the Rhodesian and Namibian (southwest Africa) disputes. Vorster's influence is vital in both sets of negotiations, which have been at the centre of his talks with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"We have got to improve our credibility among our own people, who are starting to wonder what this thing is all about when they see that the state-administered theatre and swimming pools are still closed to them, that blacks doing the same job for the government as whites get much less pay, and that they are still insulted by the whites," said Benjamin Africa, a physician who is the leader of a mulatto delegation.

"We want an interim government to create confidence among our people," added Clemens Kapuuo, an African delegate. "We have to have something to use against this propaganda by our enemies that we are puppets of the white government."

Delegations representing eight African tribes, two separate mixed-ancestry communities and the territory's 100,000 whites have been meeting since September, 1975, to draw up a constitution and form a government that would be ready to accept the Dec. 31, 1978, grant of independence Vorster has promised the territory's 900,000 inhabitants.

The delegates remained deadlocked on the powers an independent government would have and are also likely to ask Vorster's help in breaking the deadlock. The white delegation insists on a weak central government and a splitting up of power among the "ethnic communities." Other delegations see this as an attempt to perpetuate Pretoria's Bantustan policy and are demanding a unified system of government.

The internal disputes appear to have eclipsed earlier efforts to gain international acceptance for the conference by involving the Southwest African Peoples Organization (SWAPO), an insurgent group that is waging a low-level guerrilla campaign against South African forces here and which demands immediate independence.

SWAPO is recognized by the United Nations, which has declared as illegal South Africa's continuing occupation of this former German colony, which was turned over to South Africa under a League of Nations mandate after World War I.

Delegates to the conference indicate that formation of an interim government could lead to new proposals to SWAPO, which has consistently rejected past overtures to negotiate with the conference delegations. SWAPO says it will deal only with the white South African government.

South African political sources report that Kissinger and Vorster appear to have discussed ways to bring SWAPO into constitutional talks once an interim government had been formed and a constitutional draft agreed on and passed here.

STRIFE HANDICAPS PLO'S ACTIVITIES

DAMOUR, Lebanon (WP) — The children marched four abreast down the road in quick-step, their leader, a Palestinian commando, beating time on the ground with a white and black painted staff and signaling direction changes with a whistle.

Down the hill in this formerly Christian town, 15 miles south of Beirut, that has now been taken over almost entirely by the Palestine Liberation Organization, young women sit hunched over sewing machines, making uniforms.

The war may be over in Lebanon, but the Palestinians are preparing for future battles.

Their movement appears on the ropes militarily because of the taxing, 10-month Lebanese civil war. It is weakened politically because of loss of support from Arab states, such as Syria, that they thought were their friends and because of disputes within their own organization.

Publicly, the PLO is showing a defiant face to the world, declaring Saturday in a sharply worded statement that "we do not deny that the conspiracy is extensive and vicious and aimed at completely liquidating the revolution and the aspirations of the Palestinian people.

"We are not merely repeating slogans when we say that the revolution emerges stronger, richer in experience and more steadfast in the wake of every conspiracy. We are citing an obvious reality, one which the whole world can see in our continuously improving international and popular positions."

Here at Damour, 750 boys and girls, ages 6 to 14, spend one-third of their time in school engaged in military training. By the age of 14, said a teacher, the students have been trained in all weapons the Palestinians have — including sophisticated anti-tank guns supplied by Egypt.

Students as young as 8 are celebrated here for taking part in battles against Christian rightists in the central mountains. Two are credited with jumping on a rightist tank and destroying it, killing 14 persons. Another is considered a martyr for blowing himself up along with a tank.

The students also take courses in "the revolution — stories about our struggle," explained a woman teacher. They are taught to be against "imperialism," about the aim of returning to Palestine and about the Palestinian movement and its leaders.

Sometimes they learn about other revolutionary leaders, such as Fidel Castro and Che Guevera, and about revolutions in other countries such as China, Cuba, the Soviet Union and Vietnam — "especially Vietnam," said one of the teachers, wearing a blue denim jacket.

"We tell them some governments — and all the Arab governments — oppose us," said a teacher.

This reflects a common feeling among Palestinians that they are now alone in the world, except for some Communist nations, in their fight to gain a homeland. At a recent meeting of top PLO leaders, one after another was reported to have told Yasser Arafat, their chairman, that the Palestinians should cut themselves off from all Arab governments and go it alone.

Arafat, however, rejected that advice. He has spent the last two days shuttling between Beirut and Damascus for talks with top Syrian officials, trying to mend fences between them and the PLO.

Internally, Arafat was accused by the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a radical element in the PLO, of bowing to pressure from Arab nations to take a moderate stand during the expected Geneva talks next year on the Palestinian question.

Indian Constable Patrols Reserve

SOUTHWOLD, Ont. (CP) — Although someone once threatened him with a golf club, Constable Winston Williams shrugs off such incidents as part of his job.

Constable Williams, an Indian, is the new and only policeman at Oneida Indian Reserve, which has a population of about 1,500.

As a lawman, he wears a uniform and carries a badge and gun.

As an Indian, he knows the special problems of his people and has already discovered that his biggest enemy on the reserve is alcohol.

Constable Williams discovered who the main culprits involved in bootlegging were and warned them to stop.

Since his job started he has recovered two stolen cars and one was a burnt-out shell. Burned cars are a familiar trademark of the reserve, he said.

One senior provincial policeman said that on a "good" weekend, anywhere from four to six cars from the London, Ont., district end up on the reserve and more often than not the car is burned after the ride home.

Police suspect that non-Indians have taken advantage of this occasionally by burning their own cars and collecting the insurance, knowing the Indians would be blamed.

Whatever the reason, police estimate that about 60 cars end up on the reserve each year.

Constable Williams, who for the last five years was a policeman on Walpole Island, isn't the first Indian policeman to work on the reserve but he is the first to use a black and white cruiser.

The cruiser is equipped with a radio which is linked to the Ontario Provincial Police network and he said he hopes he won't have to use it.

Major Quake Hits Turkey

ISTANBUL (AP) — A major earthquake rumbled through the mountains of eastern Turkey near the Soviet border today. First reports said more than 500 persons were killed and half a dozen villages wiped out.

Burhan Yavuz Yilmaz, deputy governor of hard-hit Van province, said at least 500 were dead in Muradiye, the epicentre of the quake, 64 in the nearby town of Ercis and 10 in Diyardin. He said 95 per cent of the houses in those areas were destroyed.

Soldiers were rushed into duty as rescue workers. All communications with the stricken area were broken.

The tremors were also felt in the Caucases Mountains of the Soviet Union, but no casualties or serious destruction were immediately reported on Soviet territory.

An official of the seismological centre in the Soviet Georgian capital of Tbilisi said the ground shook in the Armenian town of Leninakan, which is just over the border from turkey.

The Kandilli Observatory in Istanbul said the quake hit at 2:25 p.m. (4:25 a.m. PST) with a magnitude of 7.9 on the Richter scale.

Quakes of magnitude 7 can cause widespread, heavy damage The earthquake in Guatemala that took 23,000 lives early this year had readings as high as 7.5.

"It was the worst tremor to hit Turkey since the one that registered 7.9 in Erzincan and killed about 30,000 in 1939," the observatory said in a statement.

STAY QUERIED

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Tuesday he has asked for a report on the decision to stay a charge of criminal negligence against Richard Redekop of Vanderhoof.

Gardom would not comment further on the renewed controversy over the death last July of Coreen Thomas, 21, a member of the Stoney Creek Reserve. (Alcohol town's main problem see Page 12.)

Canada Using Lockheed Agent

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., under fire for making questionable payments to "agents" for nuclear reactor sales in Argentina and South Korea, is using the giant Japanese trading house, Marubeni Co., as its agent in Japan.

The Marubeni trading company was involved in the Lockheed pay-off scandal in Japan.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday he has no way of knowing whether money paid by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) to foreign agents for Argentina or South Korea reactor sales was used as payoffs to promote reactor sales abroad.

And he said he has asked the Commons public accounts committee to investigate the whole affair that has arisen as a result of $10.5-million in payments by AECL to agents in Argentina and South Korea that have been questioned by the auditor general.

AECL officials are refusing to provide any further details on the South Korean and Argentine dealings and are also denying any knowledge that payoffs could have taken place.

But reliable government sources have revealed that in mid-1973 there were suggestions from an unidentified Export Development Corp. official that the EDC was having trouble figuring out how to finance an $8-million "bribe" in connection with the South Korean purchase of a CANDU reactor.

Treated as a joke at the time, the EDC reference has suddenly taken on seeming significance with this week's auditor general's report.

The report identifies as questionable an $8.1-million payment to a Tel Aviv-based agent company for services rendered to AECL on the South Korean CANDU reactor sale.

The payment was questioned because the auditor general believes it was inadequately documented.

The EDC arranged the export financing for the South Korean sale as well as the Argentine sale.

AECL said today that the agent fees on the South Korean sale were in fact not

B.C. Tel's Laura Laprise amid 141,000 new phone books

PHONE BOOK SHRUNK

B.C. Tel is beginning delivery of 141,000 new phone directories for the Victoria area and they are smaller but presumably better than ever.

Names and numbers are reduced to six point type Victoria area the last major from seven point, making the area in the province to make the conversion. Vancouver phone books went to six-point type about 30 years ago.

The books are expected to be delivered by next Wednesday, the date they come into effect. A few numbers in the new book do not come into use until Dec. 1 and B.C. Tel officials have requested that customers use the old books until then.

Customers in outlying areas will receive their copies in the mail.

The cover features the Peace River flowing through the countryside in northeastern B.C.

Using smaller type and photocomposition techniques, the book will have at least 479 names per page, an increase of 50 names over the old book in larger type.

A higher quality newsprint is used, creating a whiter look.

The changes saved B.C Tel $6,200 in printing costs and $12,300 for 44,500 fewer pounds of paper in the Victoria book.

There are more names in the white pages but only 247 pages were used, down from 310 in the old book.

A B.C. Tel spokesman said elderly people who find difficulty with the new name and number size can obtain operator assistance free if they explain they can't read the type.

Most people should be able to read the new numbers as easily as those in the old book, the spokesman said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Bligh's Log Sold

LONDON (AP) — A small, water-stained notebook used by Capt. William Bligh as a log after the mutinous crew of the HMS Bounty cast him adrift in a rowboat, was sold in just 55 seconds for $90,730 at a Christie's auction Wednesday.

Bank of B.C. Flush

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bank of British Columbia has reported a 10.8-per-cent increase in revenues, after taxes, for the 1976 fiscal year.

Olympic Fraud

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police have laid six charges of fraud, extortion and kickbacks for $360,000 against Joseph Zappia, president of Les Terrasses Zarolega, the construction company which built the Olympic Village.

Dog Killers Hunted

Busters the Loser

VANCOUVER (CP) — After 25 years Busters Auto Towing has lost its contract with the City of Vancouver. The $2 million contract will go to Unitow, a new company formed by independent tow truck operators.

Wreckage Sifted

ATHENS (Reuter) — Aviation experts sifted through the burned wreck of an Olympic Airways Japanese-built airliner today for clues to why it crashed Tuesday, killing all 50 persons on board.

★ TV TALK SPARKS PROTEST

OTTAWA (CP) —Prime Minister Trudeau's plans to address the nation tonight about the results of the Nov. 15 Quebec election have provoked bitter partisan debate.

Inside the Commons, opposition MPs chastised the prime minister Tuesday for planning to discuss the Parti Quebecois victory on radio and television before addressing Parliament on the subject.

Outside the House, opposition spokesmen protested that once again the prime minister has demanded air time from the publicly-financed CBC to discuss a semi-partisan issue. But he does not plan to allow the opposition to read his remarks in advance so appropriate replies can be prepared.

The CBC has decided the issue is partison enough for opposition parties also to be allowed air time, Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark told reporters Tuesday.

However, Clark was not sure he would respond immediately following the pretaped Trudeau broadcast at 5 p.m. PST.

"It is probable that I will accept the invitation," Clark said.

Marguerite Staying On Seattle Run

Transport Minister Jack Davis said today the Princess Marguerite will stay on the Victoria-Seattle run.

The minister said the Marguerite will be retained on the run not because of agitation in the two cities for retention, but because of good business reasons.

Davis said: "It is still a losing operation but it wouldn't lose as much, say, as putting the Queen of Surrey on the run."

There has been no decision yet on what happens to the Queen of Surrey but Davis said he is actively pursuing the possibility of leasing the vessel to the federal government for use on Canada's east coast.

That way, he said, the Queen of Surrey, which cost British Columbia taxpayers $18 million, could be earning the province $2.5 million a year on a lease basis.

The minister said the federal government is leasing two vessels like the Queen of Surrey for use on Canada's east coast and is looking for a third.

OLDER SINGLES TO GET BREAK

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government has accepted the fact that middle-aged and older people on welfare have different problems than do single, unemployed young men, says Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

"We've been treating the older singles as if they were 22- or 23-year-olds," Vander Zalm said in an interview following a closed meeting with the Vancouver Resources Board.

"They've been caught in a policy which was designed for the young guy coming in for welfare."

Vander Zalm said that as a result of the meeting he would return to Victoria with instructions to his staff to "look for changes soon" in rates in the government's new Guaranteed Available Income for Need (GAIN) program.

The Vancouver board had complained that GAIN worked a special hardship on single older people under the age of 55 because it lumped them in with al other single people as potentially employable.

Under GAIN, single persons aged 55 to 59 were given an increase of $70 per month to a total of $230, while all other single people were kept to $160.

Vander Zalm said that original idea of GAIN was to "concentrate on employment first and social assistance as the alternative."

AIB Rulings May Outlast The Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation administrator, Donald Tansley, said Tuesday that wage rulings he makes now will probably continue inforce until expiray dates of contracts even if the government decides to end its restraint program early.

He was replying to questions before th Commons finance commitee which suggested unions might try to reppen contracts which have had pay raises rolled back if the program ends before the planned expiry date of Dec. 31, 1978.

"I would think an order is for the life of the contract," he said.

But later, talking with reporters, he said the matter is a complex legal question and suggested the government might have to introduce transitional legislation when controls end to deal with such issues.

He was careful to add that he would have no role in any policy decisions made by government.

Rhodesia Crosses Border

SALISBURY (UPI) — Rhodesia said today its armed forces, using aircraft, have attacked Mozambique troops and inflicted casualties in retaliation for an "incident of unprovoked aggression."

A communique issued by security force headquarters said the action was ordered after Frelimo troops in Mozambique fired on Rhodesian forces along the eastern border.

"The security forces were subjected to heavy mortar and machine gun fire," the communiques aid. "Appropriate retaliatory measures were taken, including the use of aircraft, and it is known that Frelimo suffered a number of casualties. There were no security force casualties."

Frelimo is the Marxist movement that runs Mozambique, Rhodesia's eastern neighbor.

Meanwhile, in Geneva, nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo will try again Thursday to find a joint stand on Britain's latest bid to prevent a total breakdown of the Rhodesia peace conference.

Mugabe and Nkomo, parners in a "Patriotic Front," met today but split on whether to accept or reject the British compromise formula on a date for majority rule independence.

Conference sources said Mugabe, the militant partner in the "Patriotic Front," wanted to reject the British formula while Nkomo leaned towards acceptance.

Britain's offer was made to the two men Tuesday by conference chairman Ivor Richard. It called for completion of the legal process of independence, including elections and actual granting of independence, by March 1, 1978.

Immigration Quotas Seen

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill that will likely set a quota on the number of immigrants allowed into the country is to be introduced in the Commons today.

The bill, to be brought in by Immigration Minister Bud Cullen, is expected to establish a basic quota of between 50,000 and 100,000 new immigrants each year on a net basis. The over-all figure would be much higher but the net total is arrived at by subtracting the number of people who emigrated from Canada to other countries.

The legislation will also contain measures to steer immigrants away from the cities of Toronto, Montreal and other heavily-populated centres.

But the major thrust of the new legislation is expected to be the flexible quota syslem, based on a population plan for the country and closely tied to the number of jobs available.

The new legislation follows a wide-ranging discussion of immigration policy based on a government paper proposing changes to the Immigration Act, approved by Parliament in 1952.

The policy paper was reviewed by a Senate-Commons committee which held public hearings across the country.

The committee took a middle-of-the-road stand between the extremes of cutting immigration to zero or dropping all barriers to immigration.

The committee recommended annual immigration targets based on population goals and the labor market.

While unemployment now is at 7.6 per cent, the highest since the early sixties, Cullen predicts that in the 1980s, there will be more jobs than workers available.

DUH AND TING GOT TO GO

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to teach senior francophone civil servants how to speak English without a French-Canadian accent.

The Public Service Commission, the federal hiring and language training agency, has just established a special language course called "accent correction for senior administrators."

The aim is to help the government's top francophone bureaucrats sound less French when they speak English.

Course organizers said Tuesday the emphasis will be on clearing up common mistakes among francophones, like saying "duh" for "the" and "ting" for "thing."

"There's a joke that the 'C-H in the middle of the Montreal Forum stands for 'centre Hice'," linguist Howard Woods of the commission's language bureau said in an interview Tuesday.

The language bureau will begin advertising the course in government departments in January and will proceed with classes if enough departments want to pay $375 a person for the special training.

The course is only open to senior civil servants who have passed the government's most stringent English-language knowledge examination and are considered fully bilingual.

The course will not necessarily reduce language mistakes among francophones, he said, but it will cut annoyance among anglophones who hear words mispronounced.

Socreds Stronger Than Ever: Survey

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A public opinion survey indicates that if there was a provincial election today, the Social Credit government would be returned with an increased majority.

University of Victoria sociologist Dan Koenig said his latest sampling of vote views across B.C. suggests the Socreds have not been hurt by austerity moves they have imposed in their first 10 months in office.

At the same time, the survey shows New Democratic Party support right on the heels of declared Socred voters and s substantial block of uncommitted voters which could swing any election either way.

Provincial Liberal support has dipped while Progressive Conservative backing has climbed slightly.

The latest survey is based on replies from 599 people in September and October, a representative sample from across the province.

What Koenig did was compare responses to the question: "if another provincial election were held today, for which political party's candidate would you vote?" which appeared on the latest as well as two surveys earlier this year.

The first survey drew most of its 1,048 replies in February and the second 905 answers, most of them in April, after tabling of the provincial budget.

The results showed Social Credit support remained virtually unchanged, increasing from 323 per cent in February to 32.1 per cent in April and to 34.4 per cent in September-October.

Corresponding changes for the other parties were: NDP —31.4 per cent, 32.4 per cent and 30.6 per cent; Liberals—10.7, 10.7 and 4.8 per cent and PC—8.4, 11.1 and 11.5 per cent.

The undecided, abstainers and non-committal respondents to that question in the three surveys stood at 17.5 per cent, 13.7 per cent and 18.7 per cent.

Koenig cautioned that actual Social Credit strength customarily is considerably under-represented by his surveys asking for party prefer-

Men, Woman Charged In Deliveryboy Robbery

Two men and a woman were charged today with attacking and robbing a youth delivering a chicken order to a city apartment Tuesday night.

William Oostland, 24, Alfred Seguin, 24, and Linda M. Barnes, 24, all of 1118 Bay, were remanded without plea to Friday when they appeared in provincial court.

They are charged with robbery with violence and uttering threats of violence.

Police said Mark Pellow, 18, an employee of Chicken On The Run, was robbed of about $140 in an incident at 1118 Bay about 11 p.m.

Police said Pellow's assailants made off in his delivery van. The van was discovered early today.

Pellow, a Grade 12 student at Oak Bay Senior Secondary said he was delivering an order for chicken for five people at the address when a woman called out and told him the order was hers.

He said he went in and was led to a back room where three men were sitting.

When they told him they had no money to pay for the chicken he said he decided to leave.

Two of the men and the woman chased him down the hallway to the outside where they caught him and threw him to the ground.

Pellow said one man got him in a choke hold around his neck while the other stood beside holding a frying pan in his hand.

"I told the guy I'd give him $10 if he'd let me go," Pellow said. "But he just tightened his grip and said to me 'That's what I'm here for . . . if you don't give me all the money I'm going to kill you'."

Pellow said he handed over his wallet and the man tried to drag him back into the apartment.

"I managed to punch him in the stomach. He let go and I took off," Pellow said.

He ran to a nearby apartment and phoned for help.

"I couldn't believe it happened to me," said Pellow.

But it wasn't enough to make him quit his part-time job.

"I'll continue," he said. "I need the money".

Timber Wolf Bugged

A timber wolf captured last week near Campbell River will be "bugged" before being freed.

And wildlife experts hope the bug will provide new data on the movements and habit of a timber wolf pack at the north end of Vancouver Island.

The male wolf, which appears to be about 18 months old, was captured after being shot with a tranquilizing dart. The animal will be fitted with a special collar equipped with a battery-powered direction finder.

Regional animal control officer Dan Lay, of Nanaimo, said it is hoped the wolf — which will be released near a pack on North Vancouver Island — will provide data on the pack's range of movement in relation to elk and other wildlife.

McKenzie To Crusade For Merger

Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie plans to use his newly-won seat on the Capital Region Board to launch a personal crusade against wasteful duplication of services and toward full amalgamation of the four core municipalities.

McKenzie, who gained one of the city's two vacant seats on the board by default in Saturday's civic election, said Tuesday: "I am going to do everything in my power to see this come about."

He has no illusions as to the difficulties involved, and admitted that "as far as the political aspect is concerned it would appear that I am the odd man out."

He said former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen had attempted about four years ago to arouse interst in the long-dormant amalgamation proposal, but Pollen seemed to be a lone voice at that time and apparently gave up the effort as hopeless.

McKenzie sees the regional board as the logical vehicle to carry the full load of amalgamated services and functions, upon the disbandment of the municipalities in their present form.

There would be a centralized bureaucracy in his scheme of things, and the regional board itself would have to be strengthened. "Perhaps" the municipal halls could remain as satellite offices of the main administrative structure.

He confidently predicted that such rationalization would save "millions of dollars."

McKenzie actually polled fewer votes Saturday than two other aspirants for the second regional board seat, but took precedence over them because municipalities' regional representatives must also be elected to, or currently serving on, their councils.

He denied a suggestion that his personal vote tally reflected any lack of enthusiasm for his strong stand on cost-cutting in all facets of the city's operations.

His election performance probably suffered because two newspapers "ignored the fact I was running," he speculated, and from critical comments directed at him recently by Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis.

Far from evidence of public opposition to his views, McKenzie said there were indications on a televison program earlier this week that many Victoria residents agree with him.

"I felt I had a tremendous response from the phone calls coming, showing how many people are in favor of my stand on economic policies."

'Lucky To Be Alive'

A fire department spokesman said today a 27-year-old man is lucky to be alive after being overcome by smoke in an apartment fire at 1731 Cook early today.

John McEwen was discovered unconscious in the hallway by the front door of his apartment and was dragged to safety by Assistant Chief Charlie Miller and fireman Bill Hennis.

"He's a lucky guy," said Miller. "If we'd been seconds later I doubt if we'd have been able to save him."

Fireman Tommy Black administered first aid at the scene and an ambulance took McEwen to Victoria General Hospital where he is reported in good condition.

Miller said the fire, reported at 4:11 a.m. by a tenant who smelled smoke, was confined to the suite McEwen was found in.

Miller estimated damage at about $2,000 and said that although the cause of the fire hasn't been determined he suspects careless smoking.

He said McEwen had apparently been trying to escape and got almost to the front door when he collapsed.

The fire was quickly extinguished after tenants in the block were evacuated.

Miller said a bed chesterfield was charred, some carpet and one wall burned and extensive smoke damage done to the apartment and hallway.

FAMOUS "Flying-Lady" figurehead became such collector's item that Rolls-Royce now attach them to horn to scare thieves.

The Old Rolls Magic Still Works

Can Max go back to his Volks after his Rolls-Royce fling?

Oh, That Silence Is Awesome!

max low

When I stepped into the first car I ever owned — a 1936 Singer 9 — in the late 1950s, I never dreamed that one day I would drive a Rolls-Royce.

That old Singer, I remember, had bucket seats that always seemed to be in different places and it used to clang along the roads in New Zealand at a massive 50 miles an hour, its nine-horsepower engine almost bursting. And I was very proud of it.

The Rolls-Royce — a 1970 Silver Shadow — purrs along at almost any speed you desire, in a kind of awesome silence, with the only sound you hear coming from the tires as they gently rub the road.

It is, of course, not mine. After all, I'm not a politician or a plumber. But I did drive It. And it got me thinking about the magic in the name Rolls-Royce.

As I pulled gingerly out from the curb and inched nervously along Dallas Road, fearful of scratching the shiny beaut, I thought of when we were kids and used to spot cars and guess their makes as a pastime. We knew Rolls-Royce was "the best car in the world" as the old Rolls ad says. No kid would ever have argued with that.

There are some who might argue today in this era of high-performance cars, of Mercedes, of BMW and of Porsche. There are some who might say it's over-rated. But still the Rolls-Royce magic lives on.

Still today, as it has been for decades, Rolls-Royce is the only prestige car for many embassies and consulates around the world. And it's gaining new popularity among Hollywood and pop-music stars who want to show off their wealth in a refined sort of way.

At this stage I must say it isn't my kind of car. If I had a few thou, I wouldn't buy a Rolls. It just isn't my thing. I'd much rather have a TR2 or an MG. But then perhaps I enjoy being all cosy and cramped. If you don't, though, and you're tickled by the thought of all that space and the luxury of a polished wood and soft real leather interior, then I know where you can get your hands on a Rolls-Royce. Cheap, too!

But then everything is relative, isn't it? And at $26,995 the immaculate 1970 Silver Shadow that Plimley Motors on Yates Street is selling for a customer is "cheap." (The odometer reads 45,000.)

It seems less expensive when you compare it with a new Rolls-Royce. And when you discover that Rolls is by no means alone in the high-price car market; that you can pay $24,625 for the latest BMW, the three-litre CSI; that you can purchase the top Mercedes model, the 45SLC, for a basic $30,740 (if you want an electric sunroof, alloy wheels and a tape-recorder add another $1,500); and that you can fork out $40,000 for a hand-assembled Porsche Turbo Carrera.

Even at Plimleys, the glimmering Silver Shadow doesn't have everything to itself, for you can pay $22,325 for the new Jaguar XJS and around $32,000 for an Aston Martin.

From a humble beginning in 1904 when electrician-mechanic Henry Royce produced his first car, a tiny two-cylinder 10-horsepower model, Rolls-Royce (Henry teamed up with marketing expert Charles Rolls and the firm went into operation in 1906) became well-known in Britain as an armament firm and as a producer of civil and military jet aircraft engines, and famous around the world for its luxury cars.

That little 10-horsepower engine has grown over the years. The Silver Shadow I drove boasts a 6,750 cc engine, or roughly 325 h.p.

And it has grown in prestige and price.

A new Silver Shadow will cost anywhere from $40,000 to $50,000; the Corniche, a convertible popular in the United States, sells for $67,500 and Rolls' top-liner the elegant Camargue costs $74,000 and up! There are hosts of extras — you can still order one with a refrigerated cocktail cabinet in the back — and the company has just delivered a modified version of the Camargue to a potentate in the Middle East for around $100,000.

But, in case you're just dying to get your hands on one, you can't buy a Rolls-Royce on Vancouver Island, not a new one anyway. Nearest place for that is Clarke Simpkins Ltd. in Vancouver.

For many years, Plimleys stocked Rolls-Royce but gave the franchise up in the 1950s because they just weren't selling enough to warrant all that extra work.

"They are so meticulously built and the service was marvellous," Plimley general manager Norman Britnell told me. "If a customer had any trouble, the U.S. mechanical rep would be here in a flash from San Francisco.

"But the highest number we sold was about six in a year," he explained, "and that was back when a new Rolls was selling for just under $15,000 and you could buy a new Jag for $4,200!"

Often, the Rolls-Royce owners would pose more of a problem than the cars.

"Well, Rolls owners do tend to be on the meticulous side," Norman admitted with a grin. "And you spend a lot of time not only servicing the car but doing a lot of little things."

I can believe it. Meticulous, I should think would be somewhat of an understatement. I know I would become quite paranoid if I were to own and have to protect such a car.

Oh well, thanks for the drive, Mr. Britnell, Now, back to the real world of noise . . . and my rather-used Volkswagen.

Police Critic's Rap Uncalled for: Chief

Statements by a criminology consultant criticizing operational procedures and lack of training in the Victoria city police department are "totally unsubstantiated by the facts," Police Chief Jack Gregory said today.

"I think the comments were most uncalled for," said Gregory. "The man obviously didn't understand what was going on in the short time he was here."

He was referring to Neville Avison, criminology consultant to the federal justice department and former research director of the B.C. Police Commission, who at a Saanich police arbitration hearing last week compared city police methods unfavorably with those used in Saanich.

Avison claimed that Victoria's police cruisers are driven around "at random" as the police wait for something to happen, and that in the last two years at least 15 untrained officers had walked the streets with guns on their hips.

Gregory flatly denied that there is any random cruising.

"We have specific patrols and each car is assigned to specific duties," he said.

As for the allegation concerning armed but untrained officers, he said: "no one in this department has ever gone out armed unless he has been thoroughly trained and qualified in their use."

Gregory implied it was ironical that Avison should have compiled such a thorough dossier of city police inadequacies, after spending only a short time in the department in the specific role of conducting a survey on radio communications for the BCPC.

A similar rebuttal came from Victoria police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden, who said all members of the force are angry about Avison's remarks.

Braiden said he will go to Vancouver Friday to ask the police commission to dissociate itself from Avison's viewpoint.

Just Send Dollar, And Force a Smile

The United Way campaign committee decided Tuesday to make one last effort to hit its $800,000 target.

About $40,000 is needed.

The committee decided to try and "prick the consciences" of Victorians who promised to give money but never did during the six-week campaign that ended Oct. 22.

And on Sunday and Monday, the United Way will make a 48-hour "saturation appeal" to Greater Victorians to boost the donations over the target for the first time in a decade.

Campagin chairman Robert Siddall said the United Way is not reopening the campaign. Ninety radio spot announcements are planned for the 48-hour period.

"We are not trying to hammer the hole community till they are sick of us," Siddall said.

"The United Way represents the youth, handicapped, and aged of Greater Victoria — those who can't protect themselves.

"Our goal is almost within reach, This is a last-ditch effort. We are just asking that people send us a dollar and a smile," he added.

Greater Victoria ranks dead last among 16 largest communities in the nation when it comes to giving to the United Way.

The Windsor area, with a population smaller than Greater Victoria is raising $2.5 million this year — more than three times the Victoria drive.

Hostage Taker Gets Six Months

Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23, was sentenced in county court today to six months in jail for his part in a hostage-taking incident at Wilkinson Road jail last February.

He pleaded guilty earlier to unlawful confinement of prison guards Jim Waldron and John McDonald.

Twenty inmates barricaded themselves in the gymnasium at Wilkinson Road Feb. 19-20 and held the guards captive for 9½ hours to protest jail conditions.

Waldron and McKonald were not harmed.

Judge Leslie Cashman noted that Wilson has a criminal record and has spent much of the time since he was 15 in jail.

Although recognizing that no harm came to the guards, Cashman said "I have to bear in mind guards are as entitled to the protection of the law as our policemen."

HERITAGE TAG PINCHES

Only Sympathy from City

Victoria city council offered some sympathy but no real assurances of help Tuesday to the owners of the Hampton Court apartment building at 159 Cook Street, who complained that the proposed heritage designation of their property is a crippling financial burden.

Dr. J. J. Gow, representing owners E. and J. Murphy Ltd., told council's caucus meeting that if the designation went through his client would be left with an "unsaleable, arthritic" building on which income was restricted by rent controls but costs were constantly rising.

In addition, he said, the firm is faced with costs of at least $50,000 involved in bringing the building up to the fire marshal's requirements, and saddled with mortgages amounting to $170,000.

The mortgages were obtained on the basis that the property would retain its market value, but the heritage designation proposal has "depressed" that value to the point where the mortgages cannot be refinanced.

Operating loss on the building amounted to $1,000 a month, council was told.

Mayor Mike Young agreed that the 1913-vintage building is tied up in rent controls and lacks the tax write-off privileges of modern apartments.

He said in such cases "governmental strictures" are a greater cause of building destruction than termites or physical deterioration.

Young also conceded that if the fire marshal insisted on the whole building being brought up to 1976 safety standards, "it would be cheaper to get everyone out and light a match."

But he and other council members argued that the financial picture was not as bleak as had been painted. The building could not be worthless if it was covered by $170,000 in mortgages, they said.

Happy Hour Zapped

There's no more bubbly laughter at the University of Victoria's graduate students' happy hour these days . . . in fact no bubbly and not even a happy hour.

Graduate Students' Society president Al Rydant has cancelled the Friday night social function that was popular with faculty, staff, students and alumni.

Rydant's main complaint is the lack of support the grad society's executive gets from the membership at large — including not one taker for the vacant position of social director.

Funds slated for social functions will be diverted to other areas since there is no longer a social director, Rydant said.
